Hands Off the Wheel
A 100-Mile Sales Talk
Trainloads of Peas
A Good Enough Dollar
—By Arthur Brisbane—

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., May 1—This heavenly spot, great ocean on one side, beautiful mountains on the other, flowers and fertility between, is half way between the Hearst ranch at San Simeon and the Hodge ranches at Hodge, Cal., which will be the next stop on the way back to New York.

Steve Zegar of San Luis Obispo drives you the first 50 miles in his new, long, 12-cylinder touring car, top down, to let you see the sky and mountain tops.

Then suddenly appears from Oakland William M. Packer, insisting that you travel the next 250 miles in "a real car," and you transfer to a Chevrolet coupe, top also down, and you are off.

The tall, slim young traffic officer of the state highway patrol, with whom you soon become acquainted, assures you courteously th t "if you feel that such speed is necessary you should go about 10,000 feet above the highway and fly."

Packer has a witness to prove that he was only proving, on a straight road, with not a car in sight, that he could drive his car at 70 miles with both hands off the wheel.

The witness had thoughtlessly suggested that the longest wheelbase cars keep the road better. To be safe, with Packer driving, do not suggest that any car can do anything better than the one carrying you. Thus you avoid being suddenly reminded of the hereafter and its uncertainties.

Prosperity's return depends on distribution, which depends on salesmanship. You would feel absolutely sure about prosperity if you could listen to a Packer sales talk lasting, with no interruption, for 100 miles at a stretch. He very nearly sold a car to the young highway patrol officer, explaining WHY accidents could never originate with a car of his make.

In his preliminary sales talk, Packer drags in Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., head of General Motors; Knudsen, president of Chevrolet; all the DuPonts, Klingler, Grant, Fred Fisher. You purchase, it seems, the combined power, friendship and moral support of all these for about $700, and if that is not convenient, they have a simpler car for less money.

By the way, yesterday was President's Day, and Mr. Packer, feeling that we should all do something to gratify our President, positively delivered 400 new cars yesterday from the various Chevrolet agencies in the territory managed by him.

In the slight pause between two chapters on the importance of getting a car that does everything but talk, or heat up, you notice small cities of tents, with long rows of dark skinned men collecting their last week's pay Sunday morning.

You are in a region, a little to the north of Santa Barbara, that ships trainloads of green peas. As many as 500 men work in one vast green field, their hands and fingers moving as fast as Paderewski's. Nearly all are Japanese, Filipinos or Mexicans. Americans do not take to work that means crouching close to the ground and working steadily.

In addition, a very radical organization has used its best endeavors, threats included, to keep American workers out of the pea fields on the ground that $3 a day is not enough, and besides "it is not work for a white man."

At five cents a pound for peas in the pod, the growers "break even." Below five cents they lose money. Now the price is seven cents, holding up well, according to our informant, and growers are content.

American citizens own the land, which Asiatics may not own, under California law. Japanese lease the land and do the work, make the profit, above rent, if any.

The Santa Barbara News-Press, first class newspaper, which prints this column daily, spreads out the world's news before you, carefully selected, accurate.

Joan Crawford is asking a divorce. Not to know who she is like never to have heard of the Taj Mahal. Or the Grand Llama. She likes and respects her able young husband, the moving picture Prince of Wales, named Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. But he talks to her "late into the night," in an argumentative way. If you are an artistic genius, you cannot stand that. Nineteen hundred and thirty-three common sense says, "If your husband interferes with your career, give up your husband."

Prices of commodities generally are going up, as the dollar promises to be less exclusive and elusive. It may, some diehards tell you, be not such a very good dollar.

But the country seems to think that any little dollar that will buy things and circulate rapidly will do nicely.

'DEATH PARTY' NEW CLUE IN MURDER

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

North Adams, May 1—Police seeking the slayer of 18-year-old Leah Johnston, who was found choked and stabbed Saturday, received valuable information today indicating an "alcohol party" at a cottage on Windsor Lake, with three couples present, preceded the murder.

The police have the name of one girl, a teacher, who was at such a party, but left because it became "too rough." She left alone, the other two girls and three men remaining at the cottage.

She told a girl chum about the party Sunday before leaving for a town, 20 miles from here, to take up teaching. She was quoted as saying she did not know the names of the other two girls.

TEACHER FACES QUIZ

The teacher will be questioned this evening and may be brought here to view the body to see if the Johnston girl was one of those at the cottage. Police know the name of the man who escorted the teach-

Stocks Up in Surge to Buy

New York, May 1 (AP)—Heavy buying and voluminous profit-taking swamped security and commodity markets today.

Speculative pulses in Wall Street and other financial centers of the country again lifted their beats as the dollar took a fresh tumble against foreign currencies.

Stocks, racing higher at a strenuous opening, reacted later when traders rushed to take profits, pushed upward anew around noon, as strong support was put behind rail shares, and then met further realizing which roughly halved extreme advances of $1 to $4.

Cotton's rise of around $2 a bale was likewise cut in two, while wheat wheat, which had been up as much as a cent a bushel, reduced its gains substantially. Trading in all markets was at furious pace. Rubber, sugar and silver, among other commodities, were strong.

Stocks in the so-called commodity groups, such as sugars and metals, were somewhat less exuberant than Saturday, when the entire market surged upward.

Rails were strong at the close. General tone was irregular, with sales approximating 6,000,000 shares.

The first carload shipment of Canadian ale since the beer law passed cleared the United States Custom offices in Boston today and was delivered to its consignee, the L. J. Nugent Company.

Six hundred and twenty-five cases arrived at the South Station after noon. After the Nugent firm paid $1400 over to custof officials as an internal revenue tax workmen started to unload the Black Horse ale.

The Algonquin Club in the Back Bay was the first local organization to be delivered a supply of the imported ale.

May Day Record

(By The Associated Press)

May Day was widely celebrated today in Russia, where the Communists are all-powerful, and in Germany, where they are most hated.

For the most part the United States was quiet. Bombings in the heart of Chicago's business district caused heavy property damage—one estimate was $150,000.

In Vienna the new Dollfuss regime had streets strung with barbed wire and machine guns were mounted. Some 300 persons were arrested.

In Paris extremists for the first time since the war had an open-air assembly.

In Manila police and paraders clashed over displaying the red flag. Several persons were hurt.

Rolled up paper—including collection envelopes—was pelted today at the leader of the May Day hunger marchers as he addressed a vastly depleted flock of adherents about 2000 curious.

The barrage of paper was directed at Jack McCarthy, secretary of the Trades Union Unity League of Boston, after he had sent workers out through the crowd, distributing envelopes in which contributions to the "cause" were asked to be placed.

Most of the envelopes came back rolled up in balls and propelled through the air, and the envelope barrage gave the crowd the idea

JAILED BANKER HIDES HIS FACE IN SHAME

COURT OFFICER ROBINSON

HEAD OFFICER GRANT

Because he could no longer look the world in the eye and not wishing the world to gaze upon his shame, Edwin T. McKnight, president of the wrecked Medford Trust and active in other banks, went to jail today wearing his coat over his face. He also wore the law's brand of "common and notorious thief." He is here shown crossing the street from Cambridge court to the House of Correction in custody of Court Officer Charles Robinson and Head Court Officer Edward Grant. After two years there, he will go to State's prison for four or five years. (Boston American Photo.)

M'KNIGHT IN CELL WITH BRAND OF 'THIEF'

Face Pallid, Eyes Shut, He Hears Fate as Crowd Hoots Him

McKnight is in jail.

Banker Edwin T. McKnight today was sentenced to jail and prison for six to seven years, officially adjudicated a common and notorious thief.

For conspiracy to bribe and receiving fees, the president of the collapsed Medford Trust Co. must serve two years in the Middlesex County House of Correction.

At the expiration of that sentence he must serve four to five years in the State Prison for larceny.

CROWDS HOOT HIM

Sentence was imposed by Judge Walter L. Collins in a crowded Middlesex superiod court.

Counsel for the 58-year-old banker asked a stay of sentence. It was denied.

McKnight stood at the rail of the bar enclosure as the sentence was read, leaning on the rail.

His eyes were closed. He seemed to be in a coma.

In the silence that followed pronouncement of his punishment, a court officer walked to him and touched his arm. He opened his eyes. He said nothing.

Pale, his gray figure appearing to have shrunk inside his clothing, McKnight was taken from court across the street to the East Cambridge House of Correction with the hoots, jeers and catcalls of a crowd ringing in his ears.

Men and women had gathered in the courtyard to witness the ignominious climax of the career of the attorney-banker, former member of the Legislature, one time president of the Senate.

"So long, Eddie," several cried.

And:

"I hope you have a good vocation.

One woman shouted:

"There goes the man who got my $1,000."

DINES ON JAIL FARE

A few minutes later he was registered at the jail, had donned the jail garb and been served the regular jail luncheon fare for Monday—corned beef, cabbage and boiled turnip.

He will remain in the jail hospital until tomorrow morning when he will have the regular medical examination by the county physician. If the doctor says he is able to work, despite diabetes and high blood pressure from which he has suffered for years, he will be assigned some sort of task consistent with his training.

He will remain at the East Cambridge jail only long enough to become used to the routine and will then be transferred to the House of Correction at Billerica, sometimes disparagingly referred to as "the country club for crooks" because of its fine location and costly furnishings.

McKnight was to have been sentenced Friday but was represented as being too ill. He went to court today after having been examined by his physician, appearing for sentence voluntarily although a warrant was ready to be served by one of the detectives who have been guarding his home, fearing he would attempt to escape.

A jury last week convicted him of larceny of $16,000 from Franklin Bros., Medford contractors, three counts of conspiracy to bribe public officials and two counts of re-

House Inflation Vote Blocked by G. O. P.

Washington, May 1 (AP)—Democratic leaders abandoned efforts to force a vote today in the House on the inflation amendment to the farm relief bill fater failing to obtain unanimous consent for a ballot.

Administration opposition to the Senate "cost of production" amendment to the farm bill was transmitted to Democratic leaders as the House prepared for balloting preceding reference of the bill to a committee for an adjustment of differences between the two congressional branches.

Secretary Wallace instructed Frederic P. Lee, a Washington attorney, to represent him in conferences with the adjustment committee of senators and representatives.

In doing so, he voiced his opposition to the amendment attached by the Senate to guarantee the farmer the cost of production plus a profit. The administration plan called for a return of farm purchasing power to the basis that obtained between 1909 and 1914.

A vote to instruct the House conferees to acquiesce in the currency inflation amendment attached by the Senate was planned by House leaders before the measure was dispatched to conference.

This would remove from dispute the major issue of contention aside from sections directly connected with the farm problem itself.

Speaker Rainey plans to appoint Jones, Fulmer of South Carolina and Doxey of Mississippi, Democrats; Clarke of New York and Hope of Kansas, Republicans, all members of the agricultural committee. If the House should reject the inflation proposal today, Speaker Rainey would send Chairman Stengall (D.) of Alabama and Goldsborough (D.) of Maryland, and Luce (R.) of Massachusetts of the banking committee to the conference.

celving fees, all in connection with the award to Franklin, to whom the Medford Trust lent money, of school construction contracts.

CROOKED BANKING ENDS

Atty. Gallagher on Friday filed motions to have the verdict set aside and these were denied after h had argued today.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick A. Crafts then asked for "substantial State prison sentence."

"I ask it not only because this defendant has betrayed his trust as attorney and banker, but to let some of these bankers who have been bleeding the public for years know that their reign has ended. The time of accounting has come."

Judge Collins in passing sentence, however, made it explicit that the punishment had no connection with McKnight's actions in the Medford Trust Co. or any other bank.

"That is a matter for another court and another time," he said.

PRISON TERM FOR THEFT

"This man should have been high but the jury verdict stamps him as low."

The clerk read the sentences, two years each in the house of correction, to run concurrently, on each of the three conspiracy counts. One year each in the house of correction, to run concurrently with the other sentence, on each of the two counts of accepting fees.

Four to five years in state prison for larceny at the conclusion of the house of correction sentence.

Crafts then asked that McKnight be adjudged a common and notorious thief and Judge Collins, pointing out that such judgment is mandatory in the case of a defendant convicted of three larcenies, so judged the banker.

IN PONZI'S CLASS

Charles Ponzi, the $70,000,00 bubble financier, is now serving a state prison sentence in this category.

The courtroom was crowded, extra seats having been arranged for one hour before McKnight left his home at 64 Terrace rd., Medford to go to court.

He was pale and trembling and walked with a faltering step, descending the stairs of his house very slowly.

In the yard he paused to pat his dog, "Shuffle"—the same dog that last year bit a deputy sheriff seeking to serve a summons on Mrs. McKnight.

Then he stepped into a police car with State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neill and was driven to the court. Private detectives engaged by District Attorney Bishop to guard against McKnight fleeing jurisdiction, ended their vigil.

In his argument to have the verdict set aside, Gallagher added to his contention that it was against the law and evidence the claim that it was unconstitutional because Crafts who prosecuted is a special justice of the Waltham court.

Judge Collins, an hour before McKnight left, ruled the motions out and Crafts immediately moved for sentence.

McKnight as attorney, former member of the legislature, former president of the Senate, knew the effect of his every action.

One of his banks failed 10 years ago. Since then, Crafts said, Mc. Knight has been using the Medford Trust Co. funds for his own personal gain, accepting graft and fees.

"The evidence showed that whenever he had a chance to make money at the expens of the bank or customers, he did it," said Prosecutor Crafts.

Crafts told the court that Master Bloed's report, finding Mc. Knight personally liable for nearly $1,000,000 of the bank's losses, deliberately had been held up until after his trial so there would be no possibility of it influencing the jury.

In his argument, Gallagher said he thought Judge Collins already had made up his mind as to what the sentences would be.

McKnight's 12-13 Years Halved

Although Edwin T. McKnight will serve only six to seven years behind the bars, the aggregate of sentences imposed to run concurrently is 12 to 13 years.

Sentences totaled six years for conspiracy to bribe and two years for receiving fees; these will be covered by two years of imprisonment in the house of correction. The four to five-year sentence for larceny was not concurrent with the others.

"NOTORIOUS THIEF" ENTERS JAIL FOR SIX LONG YEARS

AS HE WENT TO HEAR HIS FATE

Edwin T. McKnight, now who has been president of the State Senate, a power in Republican politics and prime factor in several banks, now defunct, a convict. Photo shows him today as he entered Middlesex Superior Court to hear his sentence of six to seven years as a "common and notorious thief."

McKnight stood with pallid face and eyes shut as he was called a thief and sentenced. He seemed in a coma. Then he was taken to jail while the crowd hooted and jeered him.

HERE FOR TWO YEARS—THEN STATE PRISON

Here's the way McKnight, the ex-banker, became a convict today—with his coat hiding the shame on his face. He is shown being haled into the House of Correction following his sentence there and to State's prison today for stealing $16,000 and bribing officials. (Boston American Photo.)

DEBTS FLARE UP AS PROBLEM AT PARLEYS

Europe Takes Advantage of Trade Conferences, Is Feeling

Washington, May 1 (UR)—The war debt problem flared up today as the overshadowing issue while President Roosevelt prepared for his second series of economic conferences with foreign statesmen.

The administration has given assurances that "no commitments" have been made. Some congressional leaders here, though, regard parleys as an opening wedge for the debtor nations.

France confidently expects revision downward as a result of the visit here of former Premier Herriot, who has already announced his government is prepared to meet the overdue $19,000,000 payment of last December. The French feel payment of this obligation will pave the way for future changes in debts.

ASK MORATORIUM

Prime Minister MacDonald and Herriot both asked for a moratorium on the coming June 15 payment.

The Italian representative, Guido Jung, will talk with the President this week and debts will undoubtedly play a prominent part.

Roosevelt's request to Congress for blanket authority to negotiate new debt settlements is expected to accompany a request for power to negotiate tariff agreements with other countries.

DEMAND CONCESSIONS

While the administration theory has been that the debtor nations must give the United States other concessions in return for lower terms, there has been nothing to indicate Europe is willing to give anything in exchange. When the Roosevelt resolution reaches Congress, there will be powerful opposition to the adoption.

Besides the Italian representative, Germany, Mexico and Argentina will have representatives here this week to talk with President Roosevelt.

McKnight Often on Very Brink of Jail, Always Escaped

Edwin T. McKnight has escaped jail by the "skin of his teeth" through many years of financial operations.

A dozen years ago, in connection with the collapse of the Fidelity Trust Co., he was publicly branded as "crook and perjurer" by Martin Lomasney, West End political leader.

As president of the Senate he was censured by a legislative committee for approving and guaranteeing loans made by the Fidelity Trust for the purpose of gambling in stock that would be affected by pending legislation.

The present phase of his banking career had its climax in October, 1931, when his Medford Trust Co., which under his direction had been lending money left and right to irresponsible persons, closed its doors. Thousands of depositors suffered, as they suffered when the Fidelity collapsed.

GUILTY, FINED $3000

He went to Florida after the grand jury had taken up his case and when the jury indicted him he was on the verge of a hospital there with diabetes. He was arrested only after exchange of a dossier of correspondence between Middlesex County and Miami authorities. He returned voluntarily to Boston.

He waived jury trial and was tried before Judge Harold P. Williams, who found him guilty on five of eight indictments charging violation of the state banking laws. Judge Williams fined him $5000, which he paid.

The Suffolk grand jury indicted him in connection with sale of stock of the Medford Trust and the indictment was quashed by Judge Edward T. Broadhurst. That was in October of last year.

The Suffolk grand jury returned 10 indictments charging McKnight with being an accessory to aiding and abetting violations of the banking laws in connection with the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co. These indictments were quashed last January by Judge Frederick T. Greenhalge. Judge Greenhalge also found him not guilty on one Industrial Bank charge.

At various times of his appearances in court, government prosecutors have characterized him as "thief, chiseler, bandit, taker and breaker of banks." But he never went to jail.

Many of the banking laws under which he operated were enacted while he was president of the Senate.

Bank Commissioner Guy aued McKnight and other directors for financial responsibility for the Medford Trust Co. losses, and the report of the master found Mc. Knight personally liable for a sum approximating $1,000,000, at the court's discretion.

GOES BANKRUPT

Meanwhile, he had filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing $2,000,000 liabilities.

At the master's hearing evidence was brought out showing payments to Antonio Frankini, contractor, to McKnight to influence the award of contracts to Frankini for school construction work in Medford and Somerville.

Bank Commissioner Guy called these to the attention of Dist. Atty. Bishop and again the Middlesex grand jury indicted McKnight, this time for larceny, conspiracy to influence public officials and accepting a fee as a bank officer.

He went to trial before a jury which early last week found him guilty of larceny in three counts totaling $16,000 from Frankini Bros., three counts of the conspiracy and two of receiving a fee.

RAIL MESSAGE DUE TOMORROW

Washington, May 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt's message to Congress asking for railroad legislation is expected by Democratic leaders to be submitted tomorrow.

It was disclosed at the White House today, however, that the President has returned the tentative bill to advisors to work out details still in dispute.

The unofficial railroad committee of the President has agreed on the general principles providing for a federal coordinator to guide the roads through reorganization in the interests of economy.

Secretary Roper heads the railroad staff of advisers to Mr. Roosevelt. The bill will be referred to the House Interstate commerce committee, when it does reach the hill.

Chairman Rayburn is preparing for hearings.

Efforts will be made to expedite House action to make way for legislation to be requested by Mr. Roosevelt for authority to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements with foreign countries.

Blind Man Finds Secret All Jigsaw Fans Seek

New York, May 1 (AP)—It's jigsaw puzzle fan is slow at getting the pieces together, it is because he depends too much on color and picture and works without a system.

The author of that opinion is Stanley Wartenburg. The basis of the opinion is Wartenburg's experience of a year in putting jigsaw puzzles together without the aid of eyes. He has been blind since he had measles at the age of four. His sensitive fingers find wanted pieces more rapidly than the average eye.

Wartenburg is adviser to broom and mop makers in the Bourne workshop for blind men, which is maintained by the New York Association for Blind. He also invents and adapts mchinery to be used by the blind.

Wartenburg's jigsaw system is methodical. First he turns all the pieces either face down or face up by feeling for the glossy paper side. He sorts out the edge pieces and puts them together. He sorts and classifies the remaining pieces according to the nature of their curves or projections.

The rest is a search for forms, the fingers of his left hand roaming over the edges of the pieces already placed in the puzzle, and his right hand seeking the mate pieces from among the classified groups.

23 MORE SEIZED IN FARM WAR

Primghar, Ia., May 1 (AP)—Twenty-three men were arrested by a National Guard detachment today in connection with the attempted halting of a foreclosure sale here Thursday and with a subsequent attack upon Judge C. C. Bradley in Le Mars.

Among those arrested were Simon T. Jossem, county chairman of the Farmers' Holiday Association, and William Claussen, county secretary.

The men were taken to the O'Brien county jail and the troops planned to remove them to Le Mars for military trial.

Last Thursday the farmers stormed the courthouse while Sheriff E. Lemkull was holding a foreclosure sale. While 22 deputy sheriffs beat back the mob with clubs, the sale went on in the third floor of the court house.

Later some members of the group went to Le Mars where Judge Bradley was dragged from his bench, taken to a lonely cross roads and threatened with hanging unless he upheld the constitutionality of Iowa's new mortgage foreclosure moratorium laws. Bradley refused and was released after he had been choked, beaten and smeared with grease and mud.

London, May 1 (AP)—Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, sought today for reaction to the American proposal for an economic truce which he presented at last Saturday's meeting of the organizing committee of the world economic conference.

The men were taken to the O'Brien county jail and the troops planned to remove them to Le Mars for military trial.

Last Thursday the farmers stormed the courthouse while Sheriff E. Lemkull was holding a foreclosure sale. While 22 deputy sheriffs beat back the mob with clubs, the sale went on in the third floor of the court house.

Later some members of the group went to Le Mars where Judge Bradley was dragged from his bench, taken to a lonely cross roads and threatened with hanging unless he upheld the constitutionality of Iowa's new mortgage foreclosure moratorium laws. Bradley refused and was released after he had been choked, beaten and smeared with grease and mud.

GIRL WIFE TELLS CRUELTY TALE

A girl bride of six years ago was among five women whose marital ties were melted by Judge McCoole in Dedham Court today. None of the actions were contested.

Lois Thornton, of Quincy, testified that she married Robert G. Thornton of Quincy in 1927 when she was only 15. Since then, she said, her husband gave her more cuffs than kisses. She was given custody of two children and $8 a week alimony.

Mary M. Reid of Norwood told the court her husband was a victim of prohibition, never having taken drinking seriously until eight years ago. She said he was twice sent to state institutions for drunkenness, and is now in Bridgewater.

CHINESE IN PLEA FOR ARMISTICE

Tokio, May 1 (AP)—The Japanese foreign office disclosed today that Chinese leaders were seeking through American and British ministries in Peiping to negotiate a Sino-Japanese armistice.

Official reports were received that certain Chinese approached both Nelson T. Johnson, the United States minster, and Sir Miles Lampson, the British minister, proposing that they assist in opening negotiations.

A meeting between Sino-Japanese military leaders for the purpose of deciding on an armistice and establishing a neutral zone south of the Great Wall is desired.

MANY HOMELESS IN TORNADO

Yazoo City, Miss., May 1 (AP)—Seven known dead, scores of injured and the rest of hundreds of homes today marked the path of a week-end tornado which blew up around Lake Village in Southeast Arkansas and leaped the Mississippi river to strike at Yazoo City and Leavon in West Mississippi.

The storm struck first in the plantation county southwest of Lake Village late Saturday night. D. D. Boyd, 60, was killed as the blast carried his home nearly 200 feet and flattened it. Others of the family were injured and two Negroes were killed in the same vicinity.

Near Greenvillage, a Negro woman was killed. National guardsmen are hurried into the stricken areas to patron against looting and to supplement the work of relief forces. A relief camp established here gave aid to approximately 1000 made homeless

HELVERING TO HEAD REVENUE

Washington, May 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt is ready to name Guy T. Helvering, former Kansas Congressman, to be commissioner of internal revenue.

This important appointment was fixed up over the week-end by Postmaster General Farley and Senator McGill (D, Kan.).

There has been a long contest over the post. Helvering is regarded as President Roosevelt's own choice. Collectorships of revenue which have remained unfilled pending the choice of a commissioner will next be dealt out.

The Senate Judiciary committee today authorized a tentative favorable report on Charles Wyzanski, Jr., of Massachusetts, to be solicitor of the labor department. A subcommittee may, if it desires, inquire further into the appointment before reporting it to the Senate.

The committee approved the nomination of James Crawford Biggs of North Carolina as solicitor general of the United States.

United States Allows Industries to Withdraw Gold

Washington, May 1 (AP)—Regulations governing the distribution of gold to industries having legitimate uses for it were issued today by the Treasury a few hours before the expiration of the time set for all gold other than small individual sums, to be turned into the government.

The regulations outlined the method by which persons legitimately needing gold may obtain it and provided that no collector of customs might permit the export of gold unless the person sending it abroad turns over to him a license issued by the Secretary of the Treasury to permit the transaction.

Persons needing gold for legitimate purposes may file applications to purchase such quantities as required.

Applications must be filed with Federal Reserve Banks in duplicate, executed under oath and verified before an officer duly authorized to administer oaths. Each must contain the name and address of the applicant, his business, the amount of gold required, supply over a period of 90 days, the amount sold or used during the preceding calendar year, the amount and description of all gold on hand, the amount applied for and a statement that the applicant will use such gold as he may be permitted to purchase only for legitimate, and customary requirements of his business.

The Federal Reserve Bank, if satisfied that the gold is necessary to the applicant's business, may direct him to purchase it upon payment of an equivalent amount of coin or currency issued by the United States.

The records of persons and dealers using gold shall be open to inspection by the Treasury and the gold so purchased shall be disposed of only as permitted in the regulations and the executive order of President Roosevelt issued on April 5.

The regulations revoke the previous regulation issued by Secretary Woodin permitting the normal use of gold in industrial arts.

Lima, Peru, May 1 (AP)—National mourning was decreed in all Peru today for President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro, who was assassinated by a revolutionary yesterday as he was accepting the plaudits of the public at an army review.

Theatrical performances, movies, sports events and all kinds of public manifestations were suspended throughout the nation. Everywhere flags were at half staff.

The new President received the immediate support of the old military, which agreed to remain in office until he had time to select a new cabinet.

President Sanchez Cerro was killed by Abelardo Hurtado de Mendoza, who was immediately slain by guards. Two soldiers were killed, and six soldiers and two civilians—one of them a woman—injured in the riotous outbreak immediately after the assassination.

Postal Clerks in New Retirement Plea

Optional retirement after 30 years and compulsory retirement at the age of 60 was favored today by the Boston branch, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, as an alternative for President Roosevelt's order for retirement after 30 years, regardless of age.

The action came at a meeting in the American House, at which 1000 of the 1500 membership were in attendance.

First Lady Urges Health for Young

Washington, May 1 (AP)—In a child health day address, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today advocated "the use of all possible governmental agencies set up to give all people additional information in order that children may not suffer."

"We should remember," she said, "that as far as possible the children's housing should be healthful and what money we have all should be spent on that, on food, leaving only what money is actually needed for the minimum amount of clothing."

She said it was extremely important that the children's milk and vegetables should not be curtailed and should be properly distributed for "many good foods are ruined by the way in which they are cooked."

The first lady said it would be found necessary to show women how to cook the foods, adding that in this country there had been negligence in the art of cooking.

CURLEY LAUGHS AT STORY HE WILL SEEK WALSH'S SEAT

FRIENDLY WITH SENATOR NOW, HE SAYS

Evades Direct Answer to the Question as to Whether He'll Run

Press dispatches from Washington today which disclosed that official Washington expected Mayor Curley to run against Senator Walsh next year gave the mayor a laugh when informed of the news in City Hall.

At the same time the mayor left room for conjecture in his cryptic answer to the direct question:

"Will you run for senator against David I. Walsh next year?"

"That question is a bit premature, isn't it?" Curley responded with a laugh. Then, more seriously, "I have no such intent. Sen. Walsh and I are good friends . . . at the present time."

Whether the mayor meant that he would run against Walsh in the event they ceased to be friends between now and next year, His Honor preferred to leave in doubt.

POLITICIANS ARE CURIOUS

Since Mayor Curley rejected the ambassadorship to Poland a few weeks ago, Washington despatches said, the politically curious have pondered long and deeply upon the causes and possible effects of his refusal, and at that time rumors accepted as nothing more than such, had him aiming to seek the governship or the seat now held by Sen. Walsh.

During the last few days, however astute observers there have sensed the word along that Curley was giving consideration that is anything but casual to the idea of entering the fray against Senator Walsh in the 1934 campaign.

Meanwhile, no Republican has stepped forward yet as a willing candidate to oppose Walsh and already there is some talk of drafting someone from the Republican unit in the House.

Of the House Republicans, Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Attleboro, unofficial first assistant to Minority Leader Snell, and A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester, a former assistant Secretary of the Treasury, stand out as likely prospects, but it is doubtful either could be induced to leave the House.

Both came from "safe" Republican districts, and Martin, within striking distance of high honor as a representative, would have much to lost if he aspired to the Senate. Robert Luce of Waltham is another often mentioned as a possibility for the Senate.

GRANFIELD FOR GOVERNOR.

So far as the governorship is concerned, there are many who see in William J. Granfield of Longmeadow an ideal candidate to succeed Governor Ely.

Republicans in the capitol are predicting a contest between Atty.-Gen. Warner and Leverett Saltonstall, now Speaker of the Massachusetts House, for the nomination as lieutenant-governor, should Saltonstall seek the office. They doubt, however, if Saltonstal will attempt to obtain a place on the same ticket with Gaspar Bacon, now lieutenant-governor and already apparently assured of the party's indorsement for the governorship.

Vermont Murder Suspect -: Hunted in Brutal Killing -: Of North Adams Nursemaid

DID THE MURDERER USE THESE STRINGS?

A pair of knotted shoe laces found with the body of the slain North Adams domestic were believed to be an important clue to her killer. In reconstructing the crime, authorities declared that he probably fastened a gag in the girl's mouth with the strings. Holding the laces is Patrolman Leo E. Muldowney. A blue-bordered handkerchief, stained with blood, was also found. It had been used as a gag. (Boston American Photos.)

HIS ALIBI IS GOOD

Questioned three times in connection with the murder of Leah Johnston, Clarence Clum was released when he proved he was at a dance at the time the girl was killed. He denied he was engaged to her.

VICTIM OF "DEATH PARTY"

Leah Johnston, 18-year-old domestic of North Adams, was found murdered Saturday in a woodland about two miles from her home. Police today were seeking a man who was friendly with the girl. He once was accused of the murder of a Vermont woman but was cleared of the charge. He was the last person seen with the dead girl. (Boston American Photos.)

FROM HERE LEAH JOHNSTON WENT TO DEATH

"I'm going over to the Bergers to take care of their children for the night," Leah Johnston explained to her grandfather as she left the house at 118 North st., North Adams, with an overnight bag. A few hours later her dead body was found about two miles away. She had not been at the Berger home, nor had she been expected there. Police believe she used the story as an excuse to keep a "date" with a man whose name she was reluctant to mention. (Boston American Photos.)

Gay Seniors at Wellesley in Annual Hoop Race

Whoops!' My Dear!

Or, rather, it was "Hoops" and "Hoots" when the fair seniors of Wellesley College squared away for their annual hoop-rolling contest today.

And for his 27th consecutive year, G. Frank Radway "shot" them. Not literally — merely with his trusty camera.

G. Frank, or just plain "Rad," is the veteran photographer of the Boston Evening American who can remember when the girls chased him. They were Wellesley College girls and they chased him off the grounds.

Of late years, however, he has become as much a part of the May Day hoop-rolling as the hoops themselves. He got the pictures anyway so they made him an invited guest.

Hoop-rolling is the main event of May Day at the college. To the winner goes the bridal bouquet that is more or less of a prediction that she will be the first bride of the senior class. What a goal!

Skirt hems were turned back to the knees for the 100-yard course from Tower Court Hill to the chapel. Rad can remember when the styles took care of freedom of the knees.

The day was not all for seniors, however. Other classes attended chapel with them and the sophomore class delivered its annual salute before possessing the hoops with which they will race two years hence.

U. S. CURRENCY FOR GOLD BONDS

New York, May 1 (AP)—With gold payments prohibited under Presidential edict, wide attention was focused today on the first announcement of how payments will be made to holders of gold bonds.

The "gold clause" in most foreign and domestic bonds, states interest and principal are payable in gold of standard weight and value.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co., on behalf of the French citizens of Bordeaux, Lyons and Marseilles announced that in view of the impossibility of obtaining gold coin for payment of the semi-annual interest due today on the municipal exterior loans of 1919, 15-year 6 per cent gold bonds, due Nov. 1, 1934, holders are offered these options:

Payment here in United States currency upon presentation of the May 1 coupons at the office of the bankers, who are American paying agents.

Payment in United States currency in New York at the dollar equivalent of French francs at gold parity of exchange, 25.52 francs for each dollar of coupons.

CHICAGO PROBE NAMES HUSTON

Chicago, May 1 (INS)—Mired in the muck of Chicago and Cook County's billion dollar receivership and foreclosure scandal, the Sinnett legislative committee was adjourned today to consider the astounding disclosures revealed by witnesses at inquiry hearings, and to formulate from the maze of evidence new and model legislation designed to protect bondholders.

The inquiry gained momentum as bondholders told the committee the receivership situation is "a racket," and revealed huge fees, fee-splitting by lawyers, juggling of accounts, mismanagement of accounts and of property.

One of the charges was that Claudius H. Huston, one-time chairman of the Republican National Committee in the Hoover administration, received $35,000 for acting as adviser to Peabody & Co., Chicago bond house, in that concern's reorganization of a now bankrupt railway supply house.

BEERY IS SUED BY EX-ACTRESS

Los Angeles, May 1 (INS)—Barbara Bedford, once famous film actress, marshalled her legal forces today for a court appearance Thursday against Wallace Beery, screen star, whom she accuses of concealing property held in trust for Noah, eight-year-old daughter, Barbara Edith Rascoe.

Hearing on the complaint, filed under Miss Bedford's true name, Violet Rose Rascoe, will be held Thursday before Judge C. S. Crail in the probate department of the superior court.

This action alleges that when the child's father, John Albert Rascoe, actor-director, from whom Miss Bedford was divorced in 1929, died in March of this year, he named Beery as beneficiary of a $10,000 life insurance policy, proceeds of which were to be held in trust for his daughter.

The plaintiff sets forth that, in behalf of the child, she has made frequent demands to Beery that he make an accounting. In each instance, she recites, he has refused.

5 MAINE BANKS ARE CLOSED

Augusta, Me., May 1 (AP)—Five banks in Augusta, Gardiner and Rockland, with 15 out-of-town branches, were closed today on order of State Bank Commissioner Sanger N. Annis.

The institutions—The State Trust Co. and the Augusta Trust Co., both of Augusta; the Maine Trust & Banking Co. and the Gardiner Trust Co., both of Gardiner, and the Security Trust Co. of Rockland—are all owned by Financial Institutions, Inc., bank holding company controlled by Guy P. Gannett and Walter J. Wyman.

The five banks and their branches were operating under restrictions that were in effect during part of the bank holiday in March—withdrawals of $10 a week only allowed for relief of distress.

R. I. WETS FRET AT LIGHT VOTE

Providence, May 1 (AP)—A very light vote, aggregating but a small part of that cast last November, was recorded up to noon today in Rhode Island's special election on repeal of the 18th Amendment and a $3,000,000 state bond issue for unemployment relief. As a result, Gov. Green at noon sent out an emergency call to voters to go to the polls.

Light voting was reported throughout the state and observers declared the outlook not encouraging for the anti-prohibition forces.

The state's constitutional convention to ratify or reject the prohibition repealer is set for next Monday.

HITLER HUNG IN EFFIGY IN N. Y.

New York, May 1 (AP)—Hitler Fascism was hung in effigy today as part of May Day demonstrations in which thousands of Communists and Socialists marced through the streets with banners opposing Fascism, war and want.

The first to parade were 3000 Communists who marced through the lower east side led by a large fabricated dragon representing war.

Then several thousand Socialists formed in line and at its head was borne a wooden gallows labelled "Hitler Fascism," fro mwhich hung a dummy in a brown shirt bearing on the left sleeve the Nazi Swastika.

A police captain in charge of a detail escorting the Socialist parade estimated the number of marchers at 15,000.

In accordance with police regulations, an American flag was carried in the Communist parade. It was about four feet long, was not on a staff, and was carried in the hand of one of the marchers.

U. S. Dollar Drops in London and Paris

London, May 1 (AP)—The American dollar weakened in an erratic market today. Opening at $3.89 to the pound, as against Saturday's close of $3.84¾, it recovered to $3.87 and weakened to $3.90. The French franc opening at 85 francs, 43 centimes to the pound, strengthened to 84.80 and later weakened to 85.06.

In Paris the dollar hit a new low, selling at 21.85 francs in pre-bourse trading. It started at 22 francs.

Children's Racket Is Stealing Dogs

Chicago, May 1. A reward of $50 was out today for the arrest and conviction of anyone hiring school children to steal pet dogs and cats for sale to vivisection laboratories.

The Illinois Anti-Vivisection Society says the children not only steal the pets, but lured by the easy money play hookey from school to do it.

"Having thus tasted the pleasures of easy money," the letter said, "these boys are likely to continue on the path which may take them to the electric chair."

MAY DAY BOMB OUTRAGES IN CHICAGO, $150,000 LOSS

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—Five bombs exploring almost simultaneously, blasted in the 1933 May day in Chicago today with a crescendo of falling masonry and shattering glass at five huge industrial establishments in or near the loop.

Police are out to round up every known Communist, direct actionist and anarchist in the city. They arrested five youths within a few hours.

The bombs roared shortly after 2:30 a. m. Damage was estimated at $150,000. Thousands of windows were shattered and guests in downtown hotels were startled from their beds.

RADICALS BLAMED

Plate glass windows were shattered as far as five blocks from the building of the Illinois Bell Telephone Co., where the most damage, estimated at $50,000, was caused.

City officers generally believed radicals set off the bombs, but Lieut. Mills, investigator of radicalism for the police department, was not of that belief.

"From my close contact with radicals," he said, "I do not believe they were responsible. I believe there was another motive."

Officials of Sprague, Warner Grocery chain also damaged, said they believed organizations protesting the food supplied by the firm for unemployment relief might have been responsible.

LABOR WARFARE

Authorities also considered reports of underworld warfare over control of labor unions as a possible cause. One of the other places damaged was the Willett Bus & Teaming Co., where hundreds of teamsters are employed.

The other two establishments damaged were the Hibbard-Spencer-Bartlett Hardware Co. and the Stratford building, three floors of which are occupied by shops of Marshall Field & Co. as a factory. A watchman was injured.

German Youths in Clamor for Hitler

Berlin, May 1 (AP)—Thousands of Berlin youths clamored so loudly for Chancellor Adolf Hitler that he made an unscheduled appearance before them today in the first big Nationalist May day celebration.

Chief honors in the youth demonstration in the Lustgarten were planned for President Von Hindenburg, who delivered the principal address. The Chancellor limited himself to proposing three cheers for the President.

"You are the future of the German nation," the venerable President said as he formally opened the day of national labor.

"To make this example perfect, you must learn obedience. He who has learned to obey can some day issue orders. In your daily work think about today. Today shall be the cornerstone in a united Germany."

100 Stage Quiet May Day March in Capital

Washington, May 1 (AP)—May Day was marked in Washington by a Communist-organized parade in which 100 men, women and children took part.

The paraders shouting demands for unemployed relief, sex equality and liberation of the Scottsboro case defendants, marched a mile under police escort, without untoward incident. Thirty-five of the marchers were women and almost as many children.

Hunger Chiefs Demand to See Gov. Ely

to roll up newspapers and hurl those too.

McCarthy was one of several "hunger marchers" who spoke while awaiting the time to send a committee to Gov. Ely and present demands for this and that in the way of relief—for one thing and another.

TAME AFFAIR

With less than half of the expected number of "hunger marchers" present, many of them being girls and boys, and with the ranks greatly outnumbered by police, the May Day demonstration on the Common was a tame affair indeed. Less than 600 "hunger marchers" arrived, where between 1000 and 1500 had been expected. To handle these, approximately 1600 police had been detailed, but when Supt. Crowley, on duty in uniform, saw the situation was well in hand, he relieved most of the police detail and sent them back to their regular assignments.

At 2 p. m. a committee of six hunger marchers waited on Gov. Ely to present the hunger marchers' demands, and while the committee members were going through this part of the program various speakers on the Charles st. mall of the Common continued to shout against conditions here and as far away as Bolivia and Paraguay, to demand unemployment relief, cash payments to unemployed—as high as $50 a week for two persons—and to draw up a telegram of cheer to Tom Mooney in San Quentin, prison.

POLICE TAKE MOVIES

Meanwhile, Boston police had a movies operator on duty to take pictures of the hunger marcher principals and activities, and especially pictures of any riots that might develop, but none did.

It was Commissioner Hultman's idea, and the operator was Francis Sullivan, who may be detailed permanently as the department's one-man movie bureau.

Speakers in addition to McCarthy included Axel Lundfelt, who was recently evicted from his Quincy home and who was afterward ejected from the office of Mayor Ross of Quincy as an alleged Communist; Carl Geiser, who said he was an engineering student at Penn College in Cleveland; Hector Thomas, a Negro; Danny Marino, an unemployed textile worker of Lawrence; Nurmi Sparks, New England district organizer for the unemployed council, and many others.

WIDE RANGE OF TOPICS

Lundfelt aimed his shafts at Mayor Ross and the Quincy welfare board. Geiser's complaints ranged from the capitalists here, to conditions in Bolivia and Paraguay and back to charges that President Roosevelt's plan for the reforestation army is merely a blind to train men for an incipient war.

The Negro took up the fight of the Scottsboro Negroes, while Marino flayed the Lawrence welfare board and asserted that welfare recipients there have been cut down to one loaf of bread a week, and this loaf with certain insects as tenants.

It was a definitely unappreciative throng of listeners, however, and among the crowd was seen Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, state alienist.

"I was just taking a walk," said Dr. Briggs, when asked if his visit had any significance.

During the speaking, which went on and on while the rest of the hunger machers wandered around and occasionally attempted to slip over to the Veterans of Foreign Wars patriotic meeting at Parkman Bandstand, only to be turned back to police. And McCarthy read a telegram of sympathy, which he said was being sent to Tom Mooney.

The hunger marchers, in three divisions, converged on Boston Common shortly after noon, motley, perspiring assembly.

TRAFFIC JAMMED.

The almost simultaneous arrival of the three groups, one composed of marchers from south of Boston, another of marchers from Lawrence, Lowell and other places in that area, and the third made up of representatives from Fitchburg, Maynard and the up-state terrain, caused a traffic jam near the Common for half an hour after their appearance.

On arrival of the hunger marchers, a throng of several hundred that had been listening to speakers at a Veterans of Foreign Wars patriotic meeting at Parkman Bandstand, deserted this meeting and rushed over to hear the hunger marchers.

Many women and young girls and boys were in the hunger marchers' ranks, but none appeared hungry and all were jovial and in good spirits, cheering and singing and waving their banners and placards demanding unemployment insurance, cash payments to jobless and other concessions.

One delegation, the upstate group, even had a song and cheer leader, and was led on to the Common by a drummer.

The three divisions of marchers united for action simultaneously, the contingents from the South and up-state hiking and the other contingent coming in on trucks.

FRIEND OF SLAIN NURSEMAID IS HUNTED BY POLICE

er to the party and will also question him.

Two other angles loomed importantly in the murder probe. One is a search for a man of unsavory reputation who, the Boston Evening American has learned, bought a pair of shoes and several pairs of shoe laces at a local warehouse about two weeks ago.

Besides being stabbed with what was evidently a double-bladed knife of the stiletto type, the murder victim was gagged with a handkerchief which was held firmly in place by a shoelace of peculiar texture, being especially heavy and wide.

The man who is sought was in trouble some time ago, police asserted him for an alleged assault on a woman who died under somewhat mysterious circumstances. He was released.

MARRIED MAN'S LETTERS

The other angle of the murder investigation was a trip to Manchester, Vt., this afternoon, by Asst. Dist. Atty. Harold Goewey, Police Chief Conlon and State Detective Silas Smith to question a married man about love letters written to Miss Johnston.

The authorities have eliminated the murderer girl as one who called on Dr. Bessie Strongman here last Friday afternoon and sought an examination which the physician refused.

Chief Conlon expressed the opinion that the slain girl also perhaps became alarmed at the "alcohol party" and left, only to be followed by her killer who committed the crime in a frenzy.

"The information about this party is the best we have obtained so far," he said.

Three gallon cans of alcohol were in the cottage where the party took place, according to police information.

SEEN FRIDAY NIGHT

The medical examiner now places the time of death as about 1 a. m. Saturday, rather than about 3 o'clock, as previously stated. This serves to strengthen the theory that she was at this party, left alone and was followed, in the opinion of Chief Conlon.

Miss Johnston was seen going toward the Windsor Lake camps Friday evening with a man of short but powerful build. The man carried a package and the girl an overnight case. He was heard to say:

"Let the couple in back of us go by."

Miss Stella Beauchamp, 19, of Ridge View ave., and Miss Loretta Pinkey, 18, of Beaver st., said they passed the girl near the normal school.

The girl also talked with William Sheahan, 23, in Monument sq. She seemed worried, but in answer to a question said she was going to spend the night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bronson, for whom she often worked as a mother's helper.

FAILED TO KEEP DATE

It was a mother and daughter, whose names are being withheld, that overheard the remark about letting the couple go by, and saw the short, thick-set man, whom they described as about five feet five inches and dressed in a light-colored topcoat.

William Murphy, local fireman, and his wife reported seeing the pair in an auto. Thorough search is being made of all cottages at the lake.

Clarence Clum, Jr., 26, who said he had one date with Miss Johnston and spent it walking around town, was questioned ad eliminated. He had not seen the girl for several days. Ruth Crepeau, 23, a friend of the dead girl, had told police that Leah had spoke of eloping with Clum.

Fueral services will be held Tuesday afternoon from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Burdick, grandparents of the slain girl, at 110 North st.

Huge Tanks Feature May Day Parade of Soviet

Moscow, May 1 (AP)—While a bright sun beat down on Red Square, the proletariat and the military power of the Soviet Union passed in review today before the highest officials of the government and of the Communist party in the annual May Day demonstration.

From the time a 101-gun salute boomed out from the Kremlin battlements at 10 a. m. until the last section of shouting and cheering workers passed through the square late in the evening, Joseph V. Stalin, head of the Communist party, stood with his colleagues on the reviewing stand on top of the tomb of Lenin.

With him were M. I. Kalinin, chairman of the Union central executive committee, and V. M. Molotov, president of the council of people's commissars.

More than a score of gigantic tanks, painted a battleship gray and mounting three-inch guns in the turret, provided something new for foreign spectators, who never had seen tanks so powerful in previous military demonstrations.

After the military exhibition thousands of workers and peasants poured into the square from three streets, forming a solid, seething mass of humanity, filling the whole square as they marched slowly through, singing, yelling, cheering and waving banners, effigies, and signs chronicling the progress of Socialist construction.

Conspicuous by their absence from the diplomatic section of the reviewing stands were the official British representatives in Moscow, none of whom attended because of the strained relations between the two countries resulting from the Metropolitan-Vickers sabotage case.

Killings Mark Start of Day Through Cuba

Havana, Cuba, May 1 (AP)—The army and police took precautionary precautions today to prevent May Day manifestations and stamp out revolt in Oriente Province.

Another fight in Oriente yesterday was disclosed in a government announcement which said one rebel was killed and four seized by soldiers, who overtook them near San Luis.

A close censorship was applied on information from the province.

It was learned, however, that 10 men were killed and four wounded in four uprisings Saturday in San Luis, Victoria de las Tunas, Songo and Boniato. Seven dead were rebels, and the others the chief of police of San Luis and two soldiers.

All business and government activities were shut down today. All soldiers' leaves were cancelled, and the soldiers were massed at strategic points.

Opposition elements here disclaimed any connection with the Oriente revolts. They said they were waiting for the arrival this week of Sumner Welles, the new United States ambassador, in the hope he will intervene in the political situation under provisions of the Platt amendment.

Spain on Verge of Wholesale Revolt

Madrid, May 1 (AP)—A complete shutdown of business and even restaurants, throughout Spain ushered in May Day today. Almost all traffic ceased. Except in Barcelona, only physicians were allowed to use automobiles.

Authorities reported an attack was planned on the army barracks at Las Palmas, Canary Islands, which they considered a possible forerunner of a revolutionary movement throughout Spain. Civil guard reinforcements were mobilized there to prevent an uprising.

Mexico City Boiling, Troops Held Ready

Mexico City, May 1 (AP)—All federal troops in this district were held in quarters over May Day.

A parade will be held here. All businesses and even restaurants are closed. Limited street car service was permitted.

Police and military authorities began a roundup of persons carrying weapons without permits in violation of new orders that only state governors can issue such permits.

Communist Parade Allowed in Winnipeg

Winnipeg, May 1 (AP)—May Day labor parades have been permitted by police in both Winnipeg and Calgary.

Communist leaders were granted the parade permit here and have rallied a rally for this evening in Market place. Because of recent unemployment riots, Communist demonstrations were barred in Calgary, but recognized labor bodies and unemployed labor will be permitted to march.

May Day Parade Permitted in Paris

Paris, May 1 (AP)—Extremists were authorized to hold their first open air May Day assemblage since the war today upon their pledge there would be no violence.

The federations of labor urged a demonstration by unemployed for a 40-hour work week, maintenance of wages, peace and disarmament.

French Fliers Plan Attempt for Record

Paris, May 1 (AP)—Paul Codos and Aime Rossi, French aviators, intend to try for a new airplane straight-line, nonstop distance record from France to South Africa soon, they announced here. If the weather is favorable, they will leave Le Bourget, May 8.

ROOSEVELT AID IN CUBA ASKED BY REBELS

Copyright, 1933 International News Service

New York, May 1 (INS)—The Cuban revolutionists are putting their cause in the hands of President Roosevelt.

This was learned today from unimpeachable authority following the conclusion of a week's secret sessions of the Cuban revolutionary junta in the Hotel Ansonia attended by virtually all the battle-scarred political leaders of Cuba opposed to the regime of President Machado.

Tonight or tomorrow (after a translation is made) the "minimum aims" of the Cuban revolutionists will be forwarded to Washington. This action is significant, in view of the departure—probably late this week—of Sumner Welles as the newly-appointed United States Ambassador to Cuba.

The Cuban revolutionists' "minimum program" for solution of the Cuban crisis will include the following high spots:

1—Formation of a provisional government in Cuba.

2—The making of a new constitution in Cuba, or at least a revision of the present constitution.

3—Provisions for new elections in Cuba.

4—Reorganization of the political parties of Cuba with the provision that there shall be no laws against the formation of new ones. (The revolutionists claim President Machado will not countenance the formation of any party opposed to his regime.)

Sauces Not Driver of Truck in Crash

In describing a picture showing a wrecked auto in Charlestown, Saturday, the Boston Evening American stated that the wrecked car had collided with a truck operated by Mathew Sauces of Dorchester.

Sauces was in no way involved in the accident, excepting to assist the injured. The Boston Evening American regrets this erroneous report and gladly prints this correction.

5-Day Week Opposed by Sugar Interests

Washington, May 1 (AP)—Opposition of American sugar refiners to the 30-hour work week bill on the ground that it will "scrap" American industry and prove unconstitutional was put before the House labor committee today by Charles R. Crisp, former member of Congress from Georgia.

EXPERIENCE A HARD TEACHER ON A BIKE

THINGS ARE NOT WHAT THEY SEEM

When Maureen O'Sullivan and the rest of the Hollywood movie colonists took up the bicycle fad, they decided bare knees and breezy shorts would be the most comfortable costume. But after a few falls they now know better.

SANE, SENSIBLE SLACKS NOW VOGUE

No scarred and bruised knees and legs for Lillian Harvey! She's wearing slacks and a turtle neck sweater. Nice, mannish outfit! Any boy could have told the stars what to wear on a "wheel."

Skinned Shins Make Movie Stars Don Slacks

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Hollywood, May 1—What shall it be? The cute comfortable shorts with sandals and socks or bench slacks with sweaters?

That's the question that is agitating the motion picture bicycle riders. A great difference of opinion has arisen in the film colony on what constitutes a proper costume for bicycling.

A census taker reports that the early morning bicycling brigade is divided into the following groups: Shorts, 42; slacks and shirts, 31; slacks and sweaters, 19; divided skirts, 5; bathing suits 4, and the good old fashioned skirt. These statistics were compiled in fashionable Beverly Hills last Sunday morning where bicycling has taken the place of the early morning canter that used to be so popular before the bike put the horse out of business.

Maureen O'Sullivan rode a bicycle in Ireland and she was one of the first to get herself a costume. Abbreviated shorts with a plaid sleeved blouse, sandals and socks constitute the Irish Colleen's idea of what the well-dressed cyclist should wear.

Mary Pickford says that shorts are conducive to bruised knees and in order to protect herself she wears slacks. Powder blue slacks with beret to match and a white sweater is Mary's favorite costume.

Skinned shins and big black and blue spots on Janet Gaynor's knees proof that even slacks sometimes fail to protect the bicycle riders. Janet wears white or brown slacks, both with sport or blouse and looks mighty cute in her outfit.

Lillian Harvey rides a bicycle, not only to cruise about the Fox lot but on journeys that are fairly near. She went up and down the street looking for a house last week on her bike and appeared in flannel slacks, leather coat, socks and no hat.

Mrs. Edgar Selwyn has one of the most "trick" outfits in Hollywood. White linen shorts, blouse and hat to match, make Ruthie a fashion-plate among cyclists.

POLICE MASSING EVIDENCE IN RACKET WAR

Police announced today they had sufficient evidence to go before a jury or seek complaints in lower court against racketeers who have been preying on tailors, threatening them and committing violence, as revealed exclusively in the Boston Evening American.

Such action will be taken as soon as Inspectors Benjamin Goodman and William Goulston complete their investigation of complaints turned over to Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson by Dist. Atty. Foley.

While this investigation continued, Harry Burnham of Mascoma st., Roxbury, went to police headquarters and told Deputy Supt. Anderson that he was one of the organizers of the Tailors and Cleaners League, Inc., and that this organization was legitimate and had not coerced anybody into becoming members.

Burnham's statements were taken down by Harold Kraus, police stenographer. Burnham said the purpose of his organization was to promote goodwill and a code of ethics.

He said the plan was to seek cooperatio in the near future from the Chamber of Commerce and Federal Trade Commission, but said the league was not at present registered either at City Hall or the State House, and that no officers had been elected.

As a result of disclosures made by the Boston Evening American, members of the Laundrymen's and Cleansers' Drivers Union at a meeting yesterday adopted a resolution against collecting weekly fees from retail tailors to turn over to any organization.

The police inspectors now have the names of three men known to have participated in attempts to force tailors to pay fees to racketeers for protection against molestation.

A complete report on the results of the investigation will be filed with the district attorney and attorney-general.

Chicago Moves to Pay Off Teachers

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—A drive to end the money worries of Chicago's unpaid school teachers was under way today.

Armed with new legislative authority to take over properties on which tax payments are delinquent, County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough has opened the drive with publication of the names of some of the city's alleged tax dodgers on their agents. They are to be notified that they must pay or have county receivers appointed for their properties.

In this manner Mayor J. Edward Kelly hopes to raise the funds to pay the city's teachers.

What Are You Going to Do About It?

Chief developments yesterday as the war on racketeers gained impetus in various parts of the country were:

NEW YORK

Federal agents prepared to use income tax laws in strong drive against racketeering of all forms.

To this end, agents studied bank accounts of 40 men whose names were furnished by police.

CHICAGO

Police raided 100 hoodlum haunts in efforts to drive racketeers from the city before the opening of the world's fair.

Among places visited were 10 Capone "business offices" as police sought to block threatened gang war between the rival Capone and Touhy organizations.

PITTSBURGH

Mayor Herron, Public Safety Director Denny and city's clergy announced drive to banish all vice and racketeering.

U. S. Will Plug Up 'Ratholes' in War Against Racketeers

By LOUIS SEIBOLD

Washington, May 1 (US)—Two plans for putting an end to "invisible government" through racketeering are engaging the attention of the attorney-general and leaders in Congress.

The first contemplates giving the Department of Justice complete authority to negotiate with state governments an agreement to adopt laws modeled to conform to a federal statute.

The objective of the federal government is to close all the local rat holes that now protect racketeers and their killers.

The second plan favors a joint commission composed of three executive officials, including one from the army, three members each of the Senate and House, and legal officials from each of the 48 states.

PLAN NEARLY READY

Both programs designed to cover the same thing would be carried out under the direction of the attorney-general.

Executive and congressional sentiment does not favor the adoption of the commission idea, which was used by the Hoover administration in its futile attempts to solve many problems, including that of crime.

It is chiefly the purpose of President Roosevelt and Atty-Gen. Cummings to set about exterminating racketeering through backing by official authority rather than by independent agencies.

Conferences now progressing under the direction of the attorney-general are expected soon to result in a program for the guidance of the President in urging adequate legislative measures.

STIRRED BY HEARST PAPERS

Features of the new program will include limitation of state rights in approaching the racketeer problem, co-ordination between the federal and state governments in the nature of uniform laws, putting an end to alliances between corrupt state officials and politicians on the one hand and racketeers on the other, and arousing public sentiment to the full realization that there should be no state rights in the treatment of racketeering.

The demand for adoption of decisive measures is being urged on Congress by many civic organizations and individuals approving the suggestion of the Hearst newspapers that the government move without delay to suppress racketeering.

Princeton Advisor Dies

Princeton, N. J, May 1 (AP)—Dr. William Gray Schauffler, 69, is dead here at his home following a stroke Tuesday. He was medical advisor at Princeton Theological Seminary.

TWO FISHERMEN ARE DROWNED

Bingham, Me., May 1 (AP)—Two fishermen were drowned and two others were rescued today as their canoe capsized in the Kennebec river.

The dead were Milford Baker, a local photographer, and L. Philip Collette, plant manager of the Central Maine Power Company powerhouse.

Bernard I. Pierce and Harry LaPointe, also local residents, were the men saved.

The men were among the 100 or more fishermen who waited all night for the opening of the season at dawn today.

About 7 o'clock, with Pierce paddling, the canoe got too close to the swift water rushing out of the gates of Wyman dam and was sucked in. Pierce paddled frantically in an effort to drive the canoe out of the swirling pool. Exhausted he passed the lone paddle to LaPointe and as he stopped paddling the boat capsized.

Baker, Pierce and LaPointe were tossed clear but Collette's foot was caught in the canoe and his body held beneath the water. Baker's body did not reappear. LaPointe swam to a rock nearby while Pierce held onto the nearby overturned boat.

Robbed for Cash to Pay His Fine

Marlboro, May 1 (AP)—Frederick J. Walsh, 19, of Auburndale appeared in district court today on a charge of attempting to break and enter Rougeau's electrics shop. He told Judge James W. McDonald he was only seeking $3 there to pay a fine recently imposed on him in Framingham court.

Judge McDonald held him for the grand jury and imposed a $1 fine for disturbance.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Down Memory Lane!

(With Clyde Beatty, world-famous animal tamer, who comes to Boston Garden with the circus next week.)

Like most boys, I was circus crazy from my earliest recollections. The coming of the circus to Chillicothe, O. (a few miles from Bainbridge, where I was born), was the biggest event in my young life. I can remember every poster that was pasted up on any Chillicothe barn, fence, or billboard.

There were approximately 300 fences and barns in the Chillicothe area that boasted circus posters in those old days—and I could pretty nearly give you a list of the 300 locations, from memory, even now.

When I was seven years old I already possessed a sizable collection of circus posters.

I can't recall exactly the age at which I got my courage up to the point of deciding that I would become an animal trainer. Certainly I wasn't much past eight years. And I was plenty earnest about my new-found ambition. I started out by gathering together a stable of domestic animals, including mongrel dogs, alley cats, and a couple of rabbits I kept them in the barn and I spent all my leisure time training them to do tricks that I had seen the animal man do with his big cats in the circus cage. I didn't have much success either — either those dogs were especially dumb, or I was completely lacking in skill. But failure didn't daunt me in the slightest, nor the taunts of my school mates.

Then there was the back-yard circus, which a bunch of town boys used to present about three or four times every Summer. I was smaller than the other kids, and therefore never was allowed a very big part in their circus plans. But they had to come to me for my collection of circus posters. So I was able to bargain with them to put in my cat and dog act in exchange for my posters.

In front of an audience which paid the customary admission fee of 10 pins, I used to put my cats and dogs through their paces. To me the act was very real. They were, in my imagination, really lions and tigers.

Did you ever witness the head-in-the-mouth trick? The first time I saw it in the circus, it seemed to me that I was witnessing a super-miracle. The man performing it was to me the greatest man in the world. Later on, I learned to evaluate that particular trick more sanely. The fact is, of course, that no trainer has ever actually performed it. I've known some pretty reckless trainers, but I've never known or heard of one crazy enough to actually stick his head inside the mouth of a maned cat. What the trainer does who is supposed to perform this feat—and I've done it a good many times in my early days—is to put his face between the open jaws of the animal. First, however, he takes certain precautions. His right hand rests securely on the lion's upper jaw firmly. The instant he feels the slightest pressure on either hand he withdraws his frontal features —not his head, for his head has never been inside the jaws.

On a warm Sunday in the summer of 1920, the Howes Great London Shows arrived in Chillicothe, and I sneaked up to the animal tent as big as you please. There I introduced myself to Louis Roth, now in charge of the Selig Zoo in Los Angeles, asked a great many questions and, I guess, stirred Roth's fatherly interest. Anyway, he offered me the job of assistant animal caretaker at the stupendous salary of $5 a week, so I ran away from home. Three days later my father caught up with the show, administered a sound spanking and took me home. But nothing could hold me there, so I ran away again and rejoined the show at Montgomery, Alabama.

That winter the circus was sold to the Coliner Brothers and I got my first chance to go into the cage. There were only eight animals in the act and they were all of the same sex, but what a thrill I got! In 1922 I began to develop a mixed group of leopards, lions and tigers, but did not mix sexes. There were six animals in 1923 I had my shoulder badly clawed by a lion, but ended, fully recovered, in Peru, Indiana, the Coliner winter quarters. By 1926 I had brought the total of lions and tigers in my act to 22. Now, however, I had a real job on my hands.

Probably the worst moment I have ever known in the cage occurred at the winter headquarters of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus at Peru, Indiana. To avoid confusion let me point out that while I appear with the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus as its featured performer in such cities as New York and Boston, I am regularly attached to the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus. The two organizations are under the same management.

I was putting my lions and tigers, now totalling 43, through their paces and about two dozen people were looking on. Nero was going over the hurdle—instead of making a clean jump, the big creature suddenly swerved his course and came right at me. The first thing I knew I was flat on my back on the floor of the arena, with the lion standing over me. Just when I lost my chair I don't recall. It was the most sensational happening of my career. Nero is as powerful a lion as I have ever seen, and here was his chance to get me if that was his pleasure. As the big lion bent over me and bared the teeth with which he planned to mess up my features, I reached up with my right hand and planted it against his upper lip and nose. Then, with superhuman strength born of desperation, I shoved him away from me, actually succeeding in working him back as far as my arm could reach. He gave his head a snap to release himself from my palm-hold and as he did I found my hand in his mouth up to the wrist! I scraped it off in a hurry, scraping off patches of skin against his teeth. I don't understand to this day why he failed to bite my hand off.

He did not make for my face again, contenting himself with seizing what was nearest him. That happened to be the upper part of my leg. He grabbed it midway between the hip and the knee and tightened his jaws as if to snap the member in two. Having due his teeth in deeply enough to satisfy himself (it developed later that they had sunk right into the bone), he began to drag me. After he had dragged me about two yards he suddenly let me go and made for a nearby lioness. The attack was over as fast as it had begun, but I was in the hospital flat on my back for 30 weeks and at one time they thought they would have to amputate my leg. I still have to favor it a little. Nero, incidentally, is in my act as of old and a better behaved lion you have never seen.

Is my job really dangerous? The skeptical may ask me that question. My 20 trips to the hospital—all the result of attacks by lions and tigers—should answer that question. And what a host of memories come to mind when I'm day-on-day back in a hospital bed! I find myself thinking of those early days in Chillicothe and wishing how much easier life would be if I could return to training stray dogs and alley cats.

BRITAIN WARNS ON 'OPEN DOOR'

London, May 1 (AP)—Acting Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin told the House of Commons today that Britain would take any step open to it to defend the principle of the open door in Manchuria if it became necessary to defend that principle.

His statement arose from a query about whether the Government's attention had been called to "a declaration recently made by Tetsuzko Komai, Japanese member of the Manchukuo privy council, that the new Manchukuo tariff would be based on reciprocity with Japan and that Manchukuo's trade door would not remain open to states which have withheld recognition of her status."

AS A NATION PRAYS THE ROOSEVELTS GO TO CHURCH

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT MRS. F. D. ROOSEVELT

JAMES ROOSEVELT MRS. JAMES ROOSEVELT

While a nation knelt in prayer for his continued health and safety President Roosevelt, with members of his family left the White House for St. Thomas Episcopal Church at Washington yesterday to attend services. Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President, and James Roosevelt, a son, and the latter's wife, the former Betsey Cushing, of Boston, are shown with the Chief Executive. Prayers for the President and his family were offered in practically every church throughout the land.

GERMAN POLICE NOW SOLDIERS

Geneva, May 1 (INS)—By a vote of 12 to 3 the committee on effectives of the disarmament conference today decided to include in Germany's army 34,000 armed policemen assigned to barracks, as well as 5000 cadets in training.

Exclusion of 30,000 other German policemen living at home was voted 11 to 5.

Col. Strong, American expert, voted against inclusion of the cadets as well as policemen living outside barracks, declaring a similar situation exists with regard to state police in the United States.

The committee's action will cause Germany's army, as tabulated in the draft disarmament convention, to be listed at 133,000 men, instead of the 100,000 mentioned in the British arms plan.

Capital Still Talks of Gloucestermen

Washington, May 1 (AP)—Capt. Ben Pine and his delegation of New England fishing skippers, who came to Washington last week in quest of government aid for their industry, left in their wake anecdotes that will entertain the capital for weeks to come.

For instance, huge Charley Stewart of Gloucester upset the dignity of a sightseeing party in the Capitol. As the fishermen gazed at the statues in the hall, Capt. Nate Morrissey commented:

"Well, mates, I guess nothing is impossible."

"Go on with ya," Stewart boomed, "you still can't carry an armful of live cods."

SUPER-STATION READY FOR AIR

Washington, May 1 (INS)—Radio stood today on the threshold of changes which may affect the whole U. S. broadcasting setup.

Completion of a 500,000 experiment unit in Cincinnati by WLW may bring West Coast broadcasters into the backyard of Eastern listeners with low priced receivers, and vice versa.

The WLW unit will be 10 times as powerful as any now operating in the United States. Russian experts, who have had a 500,000 watt station in operation for some time, reported their unit sent out signals which would go round the world.

20 Held in Red Raid

Istanbul, May 1 (AP)—Police arrested 20 Turkish tobacco factory hands here for distributing Communistic tracts. Authorities also acted to prevent May Day demonstrations.

FILENE LAUDS 5-DAY PLAN

New York, May 1 (AP)—Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant, expressed the view here, that industry could institute the five day week without reducing wages because the unit cost of production would decrease. He addressed the alumni association of the Columbia University School of Business.

"Workmen want leisure as well as work," Filene said, "and they must have leisure if we are to use machines to capacity. They must not only have the price to buy things, but the time to consume them.

"Not merely as an emergency measure then, but as a perfectly reasonable business program, I began long ago to urge upon American industry the six-hour day and the five-day week, with no reduction of wages unless the unit cost of production should rise.

"If this program were adopted, I am convinced that unit costs would fall, because of the irresistible pressure it would bring to bear toward reducing the great wastes which still exist in most of our production, and the almost incredible waste in distribution, and because of the enormously greater market which such a move would create."

Delegates Ask Mooney Sympathy

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—Representatives of labor and fraternal organizations of 60 cities opened a three-day convention here to arouse sympathy in behalf of Tom Mooney, now serving a life sentence in San Quentin prison, California, for conviction in connection with the Preparedness Day bombing in 1916.

HEARST BONDS PAY INTEREST

San Francisco, May 1—Payment of $500,000 semi-annual interest on the outstanding first mortgage collateral and trust 6½ per cent serial gold bonds of Hearst Publications, Inc., a subsidiary of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., was being made today through the Anglo California National Bank of San Francisco, trustee under the identure.

One million dollars of these bonds are retired serially on the first of November each year until final payment of the issue and semi-annual interest is distributed to bondholders on the first of each May and November.

Hearst Publications, Inc., and its parent company, Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., have made an outstanding record during the three depression years.

In recent weeks, with the first indications of betterment in general business, there has been a pronounced increase in advertising volume and circulation among the publishing properties controlled by these two Hearst companies.

With the upturnd in business, the newspaper industry will be one of the first groups to immediately reflect improvement of conditions. The nation-wide diversification of the 12 Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., enterprises places that organization in an exceptionally advantageous position as it deals in its advertising from all lines of business and advertising is a necessity to prevent sales stagnation.

Shock Is Fatal to Henry Austin

Henry Austin, director in the Eastern Steamship Co. and a member of the firm of Hayden Stone & Co., died suddenly yesterday in New York, in his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The body last night was being brought back to Austin's home at Arlington. Death, according to Asst. Medical Examiner Casazza, was due to heart shock.

House Plan Loss at Harvard $53,541

Harvard suffered a deficit of $53,541.06 in the operation and maintenance of its houses last year, it was revealed today in the first such report made since the house plan was put in effect. Students have moved from the more expensive rooms in houses, doubling up in cheaper rooms. There will probably be a greater deficit next year as room rents have been reduced.

Ann Harding at Havana

Havana, May 1 (US)—Ann Harding and Alexander Kirkland were here today, having flown by plane from Miami.

AKRON DISASTER EVER IN DOUBT

Washington, May 1 (AP)—The cause of the Akron disaster will ever remain in the realm of conjecture, Judge Advocate Ralph G. Pennoyer today told a naval court of inquiry in his summation of the case.

"This disaster is part of the price which must inevitably be paid in the development of any new and hazardous art," he said. "As some has said, the minds of men have projected a fleet of such craft in the air and some day it must fly there."

'Thanks,' Says Roosevelt to You Well-Wishers

Washington, May 1 (AP)—If you were a sender, this is to thank you for that telegram or letter to Franklin D. Roosevelt as a result of the nation-wide observance of the unofficial "President's Day."

More than 1200 telegrams and even more letters from well-wishers reached the White House today and after a glance at the huge stack of communications, the President asked the press to convey his appreciation to the senders.

The mail today reached a high peak of 7000 letters and telegrams, a record for an administration whose mail is about 4000 separate communications a day since March 4.

Lieut. C. J. Maguire, counsel for the judge advocate, told the court that one important lesson had been learned, that all thunderstorms should be avoided.

2 BOYS DROWN IN PEABODY

Two boys were drowned in Flume pond, Peabody, today when their "boat," consisting of half a barrel, capsized.

They were Joseph Luz, 14, and Russell Retchinuk, 14, both of Forest st. They went out on the pond while on their way home from school.

Firemen were called with inhalators. The bodies were recovered by Timothy McCarthy of Peabody and another man who dove for them, but it was too late to revive them.

CURRENT RADIO COMMENT

Broadcasting Bits in Brief

By N. F. T.

Internationally known as an attorney and humanitarian, Clarence Darrow will take his turn for NBC network stations tonight, his "New Deal" discussion reaching Boston and New England (WBZ-WBZA) at 8:30.

* * *

Mr. Darrow is announced as the first in a group of speakers who plan to sum up the outlook for business and otherwise analyze the rebirth of confidence among people of the United States.

* * *

As a defense counsel, Clarence Darrow is generally regarded as the foremost in his chosen profession. He attained his widest measure of prominence during his handling of the Leopold-Loeb case in Chicago. Also well remembered stands his Scopes evolution trial in Tennessee, where he took the courtroom floor gifted against William Jennings Bryan on the Fundamentalist issue.

* * *

TUESDAY TREAT

Irene Beasley, often termed the "long, tall gal from Dixie" and a favorite with coast to coast listeners, is now in Boston. Miss Beasley is the broadcasting attraction tomorrow noon (12:30) over WBZ-WBZA when Loew Theaters launch a new radio program campaign. Guess who also has a place on the above air doings? None other than the local "young maestro," Mickey Alpert. All of which sounds as though the studio show should prove a smart one.

* * *

Particular excellence attended the splendid Ruby Newman Hour (WEEI) last night, especially when Ruby himself put aside his baton to contribute "Lover," by Rogers, a romantic violin solo. Gershwin's "Song of the Flame," at the conclusion, was something striking, too.

* * *

LISTENER LIKES

Subscriber Thornton of Cambridge writes to praise the "Unknown Great" sent a conducted each Sunday evening by Henry "Sailor" Ryan. "Those who heard him last evening" says this "collyum" customer, "must have been afforded grand proof as to the value of optimism in life" and the letter is being forwarded to Mr. Ryan for his scrap book.

* * *

Nightly half hour programs of classic music are being introduced this evening (WAAB) as a Yankee network feature for the summer months. First of these is to occupy three-quarters of an hour between 8 and 8:45 p. m. It is the entire first act of "Aida," the celebrated Verdi opera.

* * *

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace will afford the "Forum" feature tonight (WEEI), being the fourth of the Roosevelt presidential cabinet group to officially outline administration activity at Washington. His talk is labeled "Problems of the Farmer" and is due at 10:30 p. m.

LOWELL O. K.'S W. C. S. R. PLAN

Unsecured creditors with claims amounting to $26,000, who refused to join in a reorganization plan, will receive 15 cents on the dollar. Holders of $4000 worth of bonds, who refused to participate, will receive 27 cents on the dollar.

The rest of the unsecured creditors and bondholders, whose claims and holdings total nearly $6,000,000, are participating in reorganization plans. A final report will be made later. The company went into receivership in December, 1930.

WHEN Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios completed their latest production it was decided to name it "Looking Forward." Then it was realized that this was also the title of President Roosevelt's new book. The President kindly consented to view the picture at the White House and was so impressed with it that he readily permitted the use of his title "Looking Forward" on the picture. Tribute indeed to an entertainment that is destined to win your happy approval.

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

NOW THAT THE ANNUAL BOSTON HORSE SHOW that usually comes in November has been postponed definitely, or, until the dark clouds, economically speaking, show their silver linings, Boston horse lovers are eagerly anticipating the polo game at the Boston Garden on Saturday evening, May 6, that is being given for the benefit of the Boston Emergency Relief Campaign. It will be the outstanding horse event of the year.

MRS. RUSSELL BURRAGE

Mrs. Russell Burrage has assembled a committee of ardent horse enthusiasts and they are planning all sorts of novel and interesting things, in addition to the polo game, exciting as that will be. So many activities are scheduled to take place that Mr. B. Nason Hamlin, a member of the committee, suggested with his characteristic verve that it be called "One Night With Horses"; so one night with horses it will be.

Mrs. Burrage announces the following as a preliminary list of patronesses and boxholders: Mr. Newell Bent, Mrs. G. Huntington Hardford, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. George S. West, Mr. and Mrs. George H. BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

It is difficult to understand how Sherwood Anderson gains certain effects. His style is so simple that it is, at times, positively childish; and yet, in several of the stories in his latest collection, "Death in the Woods" (Liveright), there is sheer magic, a grim power that lifts you off your feet.

Seldom has he written anything as tragic and human as the opening tale. It concerns a poor old woman in a Middle West community whose whole life has been spent in giving food to animals; a lonely farm woman, bound out as a girl, handing bits of meat to the dogs around the place, feeding the pigs and the cattle; and at last she dies in the woods on a winter night, with the snow falling and the moon coming up.

The hungry dogs which had followed her when she went to the village stores to trade in some stuff sniff at her corpse, but will not touch it. But they riddle the sack of bones that the butcher had given her.

* * *

That is all; but the story is told after many years of memory of the solemn facts, pieced together until there is a perfect pattern. It rings so true that it makes the heart ache. You feel that Anderson knew such a woman and pitied her, and he lays bare her grim history with consummate art. His quick, incisive style strangely suits the theme. His words are as stark and rigid as the woman's dreadful life; and on a bridge of monosyllabic sentences he carried you over the gulf that leads to her undoing. And you see her there, lost and cold and neglected, a tragic figure—unimportant, maybe, but full of significance now through the power of Anderson's recreation of her.

In "Like a Queen" we are shown another woman of another type—a singer who took many lovers, and lost and won by turns as she swept through life. And through her Anderson found the real meaning of beauty in a curious way.

But to offset these and other brilliant stories in the volume there is such a tepid piece of work as one called "The Fight." It tells of two cousins, men now approaching fifty, who have always despised each other. Finally, one night, on a beach they have an encounter, and both are ever afterward ashamed of the physical battle they fought. Here Anderson's staccato style runs away with him, becomes utterly monotonous. A passage like this might have been written by a schoolboy in a composition test:

"John wasn't like that. He remembered Alfred's present. It was really his uncle's present. John had lost the watch right away. It slipped out of his pocket. The chain wasn't fastened. Well, it was a cheap watch."

Latest Notes About Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

MISS KATHARINE TALBOT wears her clothes in a smart and attractive manner. Saw her the other day in a sport outfit of dark blue. She had a natty feather of bright red in her blue knit hat. And, of course, you remember how gorgeous she was at the Ritz fashion show in the sunshine yellow wedding gown, with a wreath of tiny, yellow orange blossoms to hold her flowing veil.

Miss Barbara Hodges is looking radiant this spring. She is to be married in the fall to Mr. Thomas K. Danaian. We glimpsed the pair the other evening. Miss Hodges in a smart black crepe with one of the new coatees worn morning, noon or night, of white crepe with short waistline and full sleeves.

At an informal gathering of young people we glimpsed Miss Priscilla McCaffery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCaffery of Commonwealth ave., looking especially charming in a white lace frock with a soft blue sash and slippers to match. Miss Sarah Falvey of Beacon st., Boston, wore a dainty, peach colored frock, and one of the smart new coatees with full sleeves. Miss Beth Moir wore flesh pink satin.

Miss Martha Young of Dudley st., Brookline, appeared in a flowered georgette, with soft shades of pink and mauve.

Miss Sue Carl, who has such sparkling blue eyes and golden hair, wore an exquisite white net frock, springlike and smart, with full sleeves and ankle length. Of course, all evening wear is floor length and it is most attractive.

Miss Lil Maddox of Chestnut Hill appeared in a buff crepe, attractively trimmed with deep brown velvet. She wears her hair brushed back from her face and fluffed in back.

Miss Barbara Salt was charming in a powder blue crepe with a white contee and an evening coat of white lapin.

Miss Peggy Edgar was lovely in a soft nile green net. Miss Virginia Stebbins looked springlike in a gown of pink organdie with stiff organdie ruffle sleeves of blue. It reminded one of blue sky and apple blossoms. Miss Peggy Cutler wore soft pink net, and Miss "Topsy" Leeds catered to her brunette type, wearing an odd and attractive shade of aquamarine blue, with little old fashioned gloves. Miss Jean Morse wore pink crepe, attractively trimmed with brown mink fur.

Miss Betty Albers was lovely in a simple white crepe, with a cerise sash and slippers to match. She is an exquisite blonde. Her mother, Mrs. Homer Albers, wore a very good looking green net, with satin polka dots of matching shade.

Miss Patricia Parkhurst, with the smiling eyes and fluffy brown hair, wore a salmon pink taffeta, with blue and white crystal beads.

Her sister, Miss Edith Parkhurst, who was en route for the Elliot House dance in Cambridge, dropped in, looking very charming in a white satin with silver trimmings.

"Just look, dear; our new gas refrigerator came today and it's simply marvelous!"

HERETOFORE every gas refrigerator not only used gas, but there was also a small stream of water flowing through it. The gas circulates the refrigerant; the water cooled it. Together they produced a constant, intense cold.

Now there is a new gas refrigerator which uses no water at all. It is the new Air-Cooled Electrolux. One simple connection to the gas pipe and it is ready for a long lifetime of constant service. Air replaces the water, and less gas is required—you get a double saving, and more economical refrigeration than ever before. But that isn't all—

Absolute silence, without even the slightest vibration, is an exclusive feature of gas refrigeration. There are no moving parts to wear. The safe refrigerant is hermetically sealed in steel. Operation is constant, keeping the cold steady; it does not even stop for defrosting. Freezing speed and temperature can be adjusted to suit your needs. Two-temperature freezing unit provides extra protection against changes in room temperature. Plenty of ice cubes are frozen swiftly. The new Air-Cooled Electrolux has many other fine features. It is priced lower, and is sold on the easy-to-buy plan.

See this remarkable, most economical refrigerator. And remember that its perfection and economy are typical of modern gas appliances. During the past few years there have been great improvements that make gas the preferred fuel for the modern home. Visit the nearest gas office, see the new Air-Cooled Electrolux and get full particulars.

"Hot" Means HOT

An automatic gas water heater provides constant hot water day and night. Burns just enough gas to heat the water you consume, no more. Economical, convenient.

Wage-less Furnace Man

A gas furnace is its own furnace man — turns itself up and down as required, keeping the house at a perfectly uniform temperature, without attention. And there is no waste.

"SHARLIE" -:- By Beatrice Burton

Edna Confesses to Sharlie That She Loves Collins and Will Go With Him

SHARLIE and her mother and father went into the living room, but Collins' voice followed them there as he went on talking to Edna.

"I'm going down to Phoenix some time in January," he said, "to go into business there. Real estate and bonds and insurance.

"You know that I'm through here, of course . . . You'll go down there with me, won't you? I'm not taking anyone of the old organization except you. I couldn't run my business without you down there to help me."

There was a little pause and then he asked "You'll go, won't you?—I thought perhaps you'd go on ahead of me and get things started. We can go into the details tomorrow at the office."

The three people in the living room stood in a little group, listening. It was a minute or two before Edna spoke.

"Why, no, Mr. Collins," she said slowly, "I don't believe I'll go."

"Why, you couldn't work for anybody else any more than I could get along with anybody else in my office. When you're away on your vacation every year I go haywire, trying to get along with the other stenographers. You suit me, and nobody else does. That's about the size of it."

Sharlie did not have an opportunity to talk to Mr. Collins until late that night. Two seconds after Dodie walked into the kitchen the Hanaberrys telephoned and asked the Dunns and Mr. Collins to come across the street to have a game of poker with them.

"I'll be very glad to go," Mr. Collins said when Dodie told him about the invitation. And he looked as if he were very, very glad to get out of it flat. He stood in the little entrance hall while Dodie her and the two men, and Sharlie father get into his overcoat.

"Why don't you girls make some sandwiches and things?" Dodie asked, coming into the kitchen where Sharlie and Edna were at work once more. "And I'll bring everybody over here for supper along about seven."

The door of the flat closed after he and th two men and Sharlie and Edna were left alone.

In Love for Years

For fully five minutes there was no sound in the little kitchen but the clatter of dishes, the hissing of water as Edna turned on the faucets, the tap-tap of Sharlie's high heels as she walked back and forth between the sink and the cupboard, putting away the dishes.

It was she who spoke first. "Well, Edna," she said, "are you going down to Arizona with Mr. Collins?"

Silence for a moment. "Or haven't you made up your mind yet?" she asked.

Edna went on scouring the bottom of the meat pan with a ball of steel wool. "What I do depends on what you do," she said without looking up from her work. "You know how I feel about him—how I've always felt about him—don't you?"

"Oh, I don't know. You've been going around with Jim Barnum a lot lately, and—" Sharlie was beginning when she stopped her by speaking again.

"You know that I don't care for Jim Barnum, or anyone else—except Mr. Collins, don't you, Sharlie?" Her dark blue eyes swept up to Sharlie's and she turned around from the dishpan to face her. "You know I've been in love with him for years."

At 6 o'clock, when Dodie brought her guests to supper, the two girls were in the kitchen, once more, making the coffee and talking and laughing together as they hadn't laughed and talked in weeks.

The table was set with cold meat and cheese and baked beans, and as soon as everyone was seated Edna came in with a plate of Parker House rolls.

"She made them herself—Aren't they lovely?" Sharlie asked, and Dodie raised her darkened eyebrows in a look that said: "Why play up Edna to your man, silly?"

as plainly as words could have said.

"I want to talk to you," she said.

Mr. Collins sat next to Edna, and toward the end of the meal, when Maude Hanaberry was telling how she had once won hundreds of dollars betting on a horse at the Kentucky Derby, Sharlie heard him ask her if she had made up her mind about Phoenix.

About Phoenix

"Oh, I think I could be persuaded to go, perhaps," she said casually, and the look of relief that leaped into his face was like a light. He let out a shoyt laugh, and Maud Hanaberry stopped telling her racetrack story to Sharlie's father, as if it had suddenly dawned on her that she was missing something.

"I knew you'd go," Mr. Collins said to Edna in the silence that had settled over the table. He was smiling down into her eyes. "I knew you wouldn't throw me down. You just wanted to be teased—like all women—didn't you?"

The look that Dodie threw down the table at the two of them was like a javelin. "Edna," she said sharply, "when you come out of your trance will you be good enough to pass me the cheese and crackers?"

The poker game in the flat that night lasted until twelve o'clock and the rooms were blue with tobacco smoke before it was over. Edna went to bed at ten o'clock but Sharlie stayed in the living room, stretched out on the sofa with a magazine, listening to the slip and click of the chips on the mahogany tabletop, the rustle of cards, the sound of voices saying "I'll call you" or "Let's make this seven card peek."

It was the first time in her memory that she had sat up until the end of one of the family's poker games, and she was yawning and bored by the time she heard Mr. Collins remark that it was time he was thinking about leaving and going home to get some beauty sleep, and Mr. Collins sat down beside her.

"Been thinking things over?" he asked. "Made up your mind, Sharlie?" As he spoke she noticed once more that there was none of the tenderness in his voice that had been in it when he talked to Edna in the kitchen that afternoon.

Made Up Her Mind

"Yes, I've made up my mind," she said. "I just don't believe I'm the kind of pioneer woman who could go with a man down to a new place and be happy. Arizona seems terribly far away to me—and terribly uninteresting. I like you more than I like any other man; but I don't like you enough to bury myself down there for the rest of my life, waiting for the Boulder Dam to make that land valuable."

She spoke as crisply as she could, and she tried to make herself as unattractive as possible, bringing her eyes to his in a bright hard stare.

"That's the way it is," she said in a voice that was as hard as brass.

"I see—You don't like me at all," said Mr. Collins.

He got up from the stair beside her and stood there, looking down at the top of her head for a minute or two.

"Well, I guess that's all there is to be said," he added, and went heavily down the stairs.

Her mother was waiting for her, sitting beside in her arm chair in front of the gas logs with her slippers off and a cigarette in one hand. She sat up every line in her body tense, as Sharlie opened the door of the flat and stepped into the room.

"Well," she said in a voice that was as tight as the string of a ukulele, "how did things turn out?"

Sharlie laughed. She knew that she was in for a few most unpleasant moments, but she had made up her mind to carry them off with as much matter-of-fact cheerfulness as she could. "I sent him about his business, as Grandmother Dunn would say," she answered. "And I'll say this for him—he took it very calmly."

She shook her head and went on hurriedly as she saw her mother's lips open. "If you could have seen him and Edna this afternoon, Dodie, you'd understand this whole thing. Why, I couldn't marry Mr. Collins after that any more than I could run away with a married man——"

"And for a thing like that—a thing that you imagine!—you're throwing away the only chance you'll ever have to make a decent marriage!" her mother cried out, interrupting her. "Because this man who loves you wants to have Edna as his office girl. Why, he could have divorced his wife years before she died if he'd wanted Edna! You little idiot!" Without warning she burst into sobs that shook her small body. She put her head down on the fat arm of the overstuffed chair and began to talk and cry at once.

How Long Will $130 Last? This Just Missed the Answer

Yonkers, N. Y., May 1 (AP)— Bertha Deshefy will probably never know the answer to the question:

How long would it take a 6-year-old girl to spend $130?

Bertha got only as far as $110, with a time of four hours flat, when police intervened.

Robert Deshefy, contractor, left a roll of $130 in large bills in a conspicuous place in his home. Bertha found it. Out she skipped with her "treasure" and launched a candy and soda pop spree.

From store to store went Bertha, with most of her playmates in tow. They bought gum, candy, ice cream sodas and food until they could eat and drink no more. Then they started in on souvenirs, trinkets and toys.

Hollywood is simply wild about this Soap Why?

Photographed in Hollywood : : : where 9 out of 10 screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap because it keeps skin young looking. The Hollywood stars in the foreground, reading from left to right, are GENEVIEVE TOBIN, 'BOOTS' MALLORY (Fox star), GWILI ANDRE and ANITA PAGE

SCIENTISTS EXPLAIN: It contains precious elements skin itself has...and must have to stay YOUTHFUL!

HOLLYWOOD! Beautiful movie actresses! 694 of them!

Have you ever wondered why 686 of these 694 important actresses, the loveliest in the world, use this beauty soap—have used it for years?

* * *

If you've ever stopped to think of it, you realize a sad fact about your skin. Year by year, imperceptibly, it ages.

But did you ever hear that, as your skin grows older, it loses something? That something goes out of it?

The Secret of Youthful Skin

Skin science has found, contains certain precious elements. These elements, found in youthful skin of every type, keep it fresh, smooth, attractive, young . . . help guard it when exposed to wind, dust and sun.

The gradual loss of these elements is what makes skin get old looking, dry, rough, unattractive. But scientists give this welcome and all-important message—you can now check the loss of these precious elements.

This Soap actually contains Precious Elements found in skin itself

For years women everywhere have learned from experience how regular care with Lux Toilet Soap makes their complexions fresher—more youthful—more attractive.

And now scientists attest the fact that Lux Toilet Soap, with its complete freedom from harshness, its ready solubility and its content of such precious elements is an unquestionable aid in keeping the skin young looking . . . softly smooth.

Small wonder that Lux Toilet Soap is used by nearly all of the famous screen stars, who must keep their skin radiant, smooth, young looking! Small wonder it is the official soap in all the large Hollywood film studios.

A Younger Looking, Lovelier YOU

SCIENCE tells you that pure, safe Lux Toilet Soap actually contains precious elements all skin must have to look youthful. These elements are found in the skin itself—an abundance in fresh, youthful skin, less in skin that is growing old, unlovely.

HOLLYWOOD has proved through years of daily use this soap actually keeps every type of skin younger looking.

MILLIONS of women (and men) everywhere confirm Hollywood's experience.

Won't YOU prove the beautifying effect this fragrant, white Lux Toilet Soap can have on your skin?

"It has made MY skin look younger"

"What the Hollywood stars say about Lux Toilet Soap is exactly what I've found out in my own case," writes Miss Evelene Miller of New York. Miss Miller adds: "I've been using this soap for three years now and I find it really has made my skin much younger looking. It's certainly a marvelous soap all other ways, too. I will never use any other!"

CAN LOVE THRIVE IN THE SHADOW OF DIVORCE? THIS BOY FEARS TO MARRY

Son of Divorced Parents Unable to Forget Unhappiness He Was Made to Suffer

By Beatrice Fairfax

HERE IS an unhappy boy who is making a tragedy out of nothing at all, and yet I admit that I understand and sympathize.

"Cynic" is 19 and in love. The girl seems to him a miracle of perfection, and the girl's father has offered him a promising business opportunity, so that next year they can be married. All this and much more he writes me in a letter just received.

Where is the tragedy in all this? Naturally you ask me.

It's a question of fear. Both of Cynic's parents were divorced when he was ten. His mother, whom he loved, was at fault and for this unhappiness he has since suffered he blames her. Indeed, he seems to blame all women a little.

And now that a lovely young girl of his own age has charmed him into love and betrayed herself to him his fear won't let him enjoy unalloyed delight in his own good fortune.

I WANTS TO MAKE SURE.

"How can I make sure," he demands of me, "that ours will be a real marriage, a lasting one? Elsie loves me, I know. But suppose she meets a better man than I am later on? Suppose she—oh, well, Miss Fairfax, you know the kind of things that can happen.

"It's thinking of this that terrifies me and keeps me awake at night. I simply could not endure it if my marriage proved a failure.

"Because my own childhood was ruined by divorce, I had meant never to marry, but in spite of myself I fell in love. Now it seems to me that I am in a terrible trap. It's either give up my sweetheart altogether, or marry her fearing every minute that I shall lose her."

Now a happy marriage itself would perhaps cure this miserable state of mind, but it is not fair that a lighthearted girl should have the whole burden of easing her soul-sick lover placed on her shoulders.

What "Cynic" needs, I think, during the next few months are long walks several times a week with some wise, older friend who will pump courage and plain common sense into him and help him to cast aside his own fears.

LEARN TO TRUST

The boy must learn to trust his betrothed completely, as well as love her. Otherwise he has no right to marry her. And he must learn before the wedding too, to believe in his own marriage and trust that.

It won't, of course, be a success, but no marriage is. A marriage ended by divorce is no worse than a marriage poisoned by fear and mistrust—and probably not as bad.

Besides how about his own responsibility for the happiness of marriage? He can't escape this dep nd on the one. On the contrary, if his ob ject pulls her so hard, he will never be the slightest chance of ever capsize.

Having achieved a better state of mind, marriage to the right girl will, in itself, be the final complete remedy for our young man's difficulties, and I am sure that in a year he will be transformed.

May Day Set Aside as Child Health Day for Welfare of the Young

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

MAY FIRST is set aside as Child Health Day by the express order of the American Child Health association. This day has been chosen as an appropriate time to remind the nation of the importance of child welfare.

The association is stressing three fundamental necessities. They are the nutrition of children, the importance of the clean and adequate supply of milk and the protection of the mothers. This is a wise and forward looking program.

In considering the food requirements of children we must always keep in mind the fact that they are still growing. They are constantly building up energy by their vigorous activities. But they require more building foods than adults. A child develops easily, but only by reason of the assistance given by proper food. If the food supply of the child is scanty, growth is retarded.

A faulty diet results in undernourishment with all the evils of what the doctors call "malnutrition." Malnutrition in a child is a serious thing and if it is not corrected may prove fatal. Malnutrition may result from other causes than the lack of proper food. It may follow improper rest, lack of sunshine, fresh air and exercise and diseases of the intestines or kidneys. But in most instances, it is caused by improper or insufficient food.

Dr. Copeland

Milk should be made the foundation of all meals. Never permit a child to become indifferent to milk and to develop a dislike for this important food. All health authorities agree that milk is the most nearly perfect food known and that each growing child requires a daily quart of milk. The best milk is none too good for your child.

Certified milk should be used whenever possible. The safest milk is pasteurized. When good milk is used in abundance the child is protected from "catching diseases."

In general, the child's food should be carefully selected and the meals well planned. The diet should include milk, cream, butter, eggs, cereals, vegetables and fruits. Meat may be served occasionally. It may be given boiled, roasted or baked. I would advise against any fried foods for children.

Orange or tomato juice is extremely valuable. It is well, too, to give cod liver oil during the first two years of the child's life.

We must not overlook the need of care for the expectant mother. It is now an accepted fact that the care which she is given influences the future health of the child. Every prospective mother should receive the necessary medical examinations during the prenatal period, as well as after the birth of the child. If it is impossible to enjoy the services of a good private physician, the local health station or maternity clinic will give this advice and care.

GARDENING TIME IS HERE AGAIN

Miss Marjorie Mack chooses the "gardeniama," a pair of two-piece printed percale pajamas in navy and white, which are perfect for gardening. Over them she wears a little red and white striped cotton gardener's apron with a deep, efficient pocket held snugly against her. The cotton gloves match the apron, as you see. A broad-brimmed straw hat and a pair of workmanlike sneakers complete the outfit. (For further information, please inquire of Margaret Matson.)

Feminine Gardener as Glorious as Her Flowers

By MARGARET MATSON

TO HAVE the right sort of gardening clothes is quite essential. No doubt the flowers will be glorious no matter what one wears, but if the gardener cannot keep herself as lovely as the blossoms, it were better that she left them to someone else.

There are differences of opinion among feminine gardeners as to the proper clothes. Some prefer skirts, some pajamas or overalls. Much of it is a matter of age, with the older gardeners adhering to skirts and the younger ones eager for the opportunity to discard them. Cotton is the best material regardless of which is chosen because it can be laundered so easily.

In the photograph above, we see a pair of cotton pajama which were designed especially for gardening. They are therefore, cut rather high about the throat to prevent sunburn. The arms are bare because it is easier to work with them so, but if one wishes, she could don a light weight sweater to protect them. On her hands are cotton gloves which are easily washed and her apron, instead of dropping down where it would be in the way is brief and snug with a huge pocket for seeds. Her hat brim is wide, again because of the sun. It could be even wider if one wished.

Miss Mack also, is wearing sneakers because they are the choice of a great many women. The rubber sole is rather an item. However, on dry days—and it would be a dry day on which one would wear such an outfit—sandals or "sundals" are equally good.

On damp, chilly days most women prefer to wear a pair of jersey sweaters, a bandana or snug hat, and either an old woolen skirt or a pair of stout overalls. Frequently, they even put on a set of lightweight woolen undies, just for the extra snugness. Then, too, of course, stouter shoes are worn—golf oxfords usually.

Taking Out Wrinkle Insurance Does Not Cost Much

By HELEN FOLLETT

TAKING OUT wrinkle insurance doesn't cost much; just a jar of tissue feeding cream, a sweet disposition, 10 minutes' treatment every night. No skipping half-hearted attempts to the complex on before turning in under the blankets. The skin surface must be clean, scrupulously clean. The soapy facia rubbing warms the flesh; only cosmetics are more effective when applied to a glowing epidermis. Spread on the cream quickly. Begin a light tapping with finger ends spanning the under side of the chin. Work upward to the temples. Treat the nose with light rotary movements. While cream remains on iron with an ice cube. Next morning plenty of cold water.

Callouses

IF THE HEEL rocks in the shoe at every step callouses spots will appear to cause discomfort. Heavy skin forms as a protecting barrier against continued injury. After it thickens to excess, it becomes painful, has to be removed by soaking the foot in warm water to which soda has been added, rubbing with a pumice stone.

When Growth Stops

NO HOPE for growth after the age of seventeen or so. So the pint-size girl stop her worrying, it won't do a bit of good. By keeping the backbone stretched to its fullest extent, she will feel taller, look taller. Short girls still in the growing period, should get nine hours' sleep every night, stick to a balanced diet, exercise out of doors every day. The rompers and the tomboys are likely to grow taller than the little house plants.

Treating Styes

STYES SIGNIFY understandard health when they appear persistently over a long period. They are small boils should be treated with hot fomentations, gauze which has been dipped in a hot solution of boric acid. Only a medical man should lance them.

Jim smiled, for the first time. "It's mighty good to hear you say that, Betty. I feared that—that it would be no use—after——"

Betty interrupted him. "Yes, I know—After I made such a silly little fool of myself. I know——"

THEBAUD CREW DISBANDS FOR FISHING TRIP

Gloucester, May 1—The veteran skippers who served as crew of the Gertrude L. Thebaud on her mission to Washington and returned here yesterday to meet a thunderous reception, plunged back into their business of fishing today.

Those of the Thebaud's special company, who have vessels in commission, are already shaping their courses out to the fishing grounds.

The famous schooner is at her familiar place at Ben Pine's wharf. She is scraped and ready for painting and, in a short time, she will be back on the banks.

PLANE GREETS THEM

Even before they sighted Cape Ann a coast guard plane circled over the Thebaud and went through a series of aerial acrobatics in a gesture of welcome. Then boats began to appear, fishing schooners, coast guard craft and privately owned vessels.

Blasts of marine horns and whistles and the notes of an American Legion band were mingled with the cheers of those aboard the boats dinning their welcome to the returning embassy. In a short time the Thebaud was practically surrounded by craft of all types.

Mayor John Parker and municipal officials boarded the former fishing schooner Vina, now a coast guard craft, and went down to meet the Thebaud. They boarded her and an impromptu reception was held. Then with the famous schooner in the van a victorious procession into Gloucester Harbor was staged.

WHISTLES BLOW

Practically the entire population of the city lined the wharves to greet the returning skippers. Some were perched on roofs and in the rigging of moored vessels. Whistles all over the city were sounded in greeting to the returning Thebaud.

[illegible] Gloucester skippers with the exception of Captain Val O'Neil, [illegible] bay, Me. Those from other cities had dropped from the vessels at [illegible] on her return from Washington.

Capital Still Talks of Gloucestermen

Washington, May 1 (AP)—Capt. Ben Pine and his delegation of New England fishing skippers, who came to Washington last week in quest of government aid for their industry, left in their wake anecdotes that will entertain the capital for weeks to come.

For instance, huge Charley Stewart of Gloucester upset the dignity of a sightseeing party in the Capitol. As the fishermen gazed at the statues in the hall, Capt. Nate Morrissey commented:

"Well, mates, I guess nothing is impossible."

"Go on with ye," Stewart boomed, "you still can't carry an armful of live eels."

Fresh History Every Day

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Inflation was smuggled in as a hitch-hiker on the farm wagon.

Now we will have to look in all the woodpiles to make sure they ain't half kindling and half stowaways.

Senator Borah certainly made a magnificent speech about something. We admire Senator Glass for saying, even if he was wrong, nobody could convince him of it.

Mr. Borah sort of lost his head and yelled things he should have whispered.

However, we can all fall back on that dignified apology, "If I said anything I am sorry for, I am glad of it."

But all that was last week. We are taking our history fresh every morning with the milk and eggs.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1933 C. M. Co.

LION CUBS PETS OF NOTED TRAINER

Aren't they cute you say. Yes, but how would you like to have them do a little crawling on you? Not so cute, we say. They're only lion cubs, but they could make your skin look very bad. You'll notice that Clyde Beatty, the famous animal trainer of the movies and veteran of many circus performances, wears a pair of gloves when he plays with them. You'll see Clyde and his many animal friends do their stuff at the Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus which comes to the Boston Garden next Monday. Clowns, animals and acrobats, all make up the great show that will be viewed by hundreds of Bostonians.

New Greta Garbo, Talkative and Smiling, Back in Hollywood

Hollywood, May 1 (INS)—Greta Garbo has come back to Hollywood.

A vastly different Garbo, however, from the solitary, elusive, nervous figure that sailed away several months ago to visit her native Sweden.

For the Garbo who is back in Hollywood today, to resume her film work at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, is a happy, smiling, gracious person, who—

Talks and poses for pictures!

No one knows just what has brought about this change—her long rest, the sight of family and home scenes, or the leisurely voyage back to America—but the change is there.

A TRANSFORMED ACTRESS

It was first apparent when the actress who for years has shielded herself from public gaze by hiding behind veils, dark glasses and semi-disguises and lived the life of a virtual recluse stepped gaily down the gangplank of the Swedish motorship Annie Johnson in San Diego and smiled and waved to the crowd waiting a glimpse of her.

First she paused to bid adieu to Capt. C. O. Holmberg and thank him for a pleasant voyage. Then she grasped the hand of G. W. Olsen, the Swedish consul, who had come from Los Angeles to greet her.

"Oh, it is so gude to be back here. The sun shines so beautifully, I am so vairee happy to be back," she exclaimed as she waved to the crowd.

Then, unlike the old Garbo, who won for herself the title of the "Mystery Woman of Hollywood" and the "Sphinx Woman," she posed graciously, almost eagerly, for the photographers and chatted smilingly with the "gentlemen of the press."

NEW PICTURE

Yes, she was back to start work on her new picture, "Queen Christiana," on which production begins tomorrow. She had a marvelous trip and felt very well. What were her plans for the future?

"Who can tell? In life we do not know from one day to another—one hour to another. In it not so, my friends? One never knows about tomorrow."

Something to Say

—not just saying something

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click with them... that they're milder and taste better. I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."

OUTSIDE: TECH'S NEW EASTMAN LABORATORY

EXCHANGE BANK DIVIDEND TO BE READY SOON

Will Be Paid After the R. F. C. Loan Is Out of Way

Although the savings department of the closed Exchange Trust Co. still owes $670,789 to the Reconstruction Finance Corp., Essex S Abbott, the liquidating agent, in a report today stated that he believed this could be paid off within a short time, after which a plan can be developed for paying a dividend to savings depositors.

At present the liquidating agent has $131,245 in cash to apply against this loan, leaving $539,544 to be raised in liquidation of assets before the loan is fully met.

When this loan is paid, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. will have mortgages with a face value of $2,240,824, now held as collateral.

When the bank closed, the savings department owed the R. F. C. $480,851, and the National Credit Association, $448,725. The commercial department owned the National Credit Association, the Federal Reserve Bank andother banks $1,983,-000.

MORE THAN TWO MILLION

These borrowings, totaling $3,-429,576, were secured by stocks, bonds, notes and mortgages. Since the closing, the liquidating agent has paid $2,810,960 on these loans, the money being obtained by collections on loans and sales of assets.

This leaves $449,427 still owing to the R. F. C. in the commercial department and $670,789 in the savings department.

Plans for paying dividends to depositors have been retarded by the necessity of meeting these secured claims, Abbott stated. Payment of a substantial dividend to savings depositors is expected to precede any payments to commercial department depositors.

The report is for the year ending April 29 and shows liquidating expenses of $95,936, which is less than 25 per cent of the income. The liquidating agent has paid salaries of $57,422.

MORE THAN 12,000 CLAIMS

Claims approved in the savings department amount to $7,547,294, and in the commercial, $1,624,294. There are 11,272 unproved savings claims and 1380 commercial.

The closed bank has mortgages of a total face value of $5,287,225, including those pledged to the R. F. C. as security for loans. It has real estate in possession and enclosed property valued at $1,-036,363.

The total income for the year received from interest on bonds, mortgages, notes and bank deposits, and from dividends on stocks was $406,396; rentals received, $111,-258. Prior to the closing there were 99 officers and employes, receiving $192,164 in salaries, the report states. Now there are 28, besides the agent, receiving $47,490.

The agent has 68 suits pending against persons indebted to the bank. Stockholders have been assessed to the full par value of their holdings and have paid in $50,995. Suits will be filed shortly against those failing to pay the assessments.

MILTON FIGHTS PAY RULING

Milton selectmen, on behalf of the town, today carried to superior court their fight to cut the pay of policemen and firemen

In two petitions, filed in Dedham court, the selectmen seek to overrule a recent decision by Judge Avery in Quincy court that the 12½ per-cent pay cut for town employes under civil service was illegal.

The pay cuts were made because of the town's financial condition, the selectmen declared. They insist Judge Avery had no right to question their view of the town's financial condition.

The result of their appeal will be watched with interest by thousands of civil service employes of other towns whose pay has been cut.

COUNTY BUDGET CUT $448,454

The suffolk County budget for 1933, calling for expenditure of $3,500,590 was sent to the council for approval today by Mayor Curley.

Reductions of $448,454 are effected over appropriations of last year. Of this saving $205,000 results from wage reductions, $37,900 through failure to fill vacancies, $45,000 through decreased cost of food and fuel for county institutions and $29,000 on plant repairs. It is anticipated that $60,000 will be saved through reduction of jurors' compensation.

Veto Hospital Plan

STOWAWAY DOG IN PORT

Whose dog is this? He is in a strange country. Have you ever met a stowaway dog? Well, here is one. They named him "Bob" for the moment. "Bob" was found aboard after the S. S. Here you see Harry Brooks, general agent for the Eastern Steamship Company, petting the dog, telling him he's going back to St. John and to his master, Frank Miller, a Bay of Fundy pilot.

COSTELLO BODY FINALLY BURIED

Salem May 1 (AP)—The body of William J. Costello former captain in the Peabody fire department for whose alleged murder his widow, Jessie E. Costello, is awaiting trial, was buried today in St. Mary's cemetery.

Burial was made after officials had been informed the defense and state medical experts had concluded all examinations

The body was examined yesterday afternoon by Dr. Francis P. McCarthy of Boston, defense pathologist. It then was removed to a tomb in the cemetery where it has rested since the day of his funeral, Feb. 17, except for removal for medical examinations, of which there have been four

The body was buried in the family plot, beside the grave of Costello's infant son, William J. Jr. The infant's body also was disinterred for examination after the father's death to determine whether there was any evidence of foul play. The child died several years ago and the body yielded no clue.

TRUCE OFFER IN LEATHER STRIKE

Representatives of strikers and manufacturers in the leather strike in Peabody, Salem, Lynn and Danvers met in Salem today for further discussion of a program expected to end the trouble

The plan under which the strikers would return to work immediately with manufacturers recognizing their union for a trial period was put forward by Judge Daniel Manning, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, after it had seemed unlikely that any agreement would be reached

Strikers picketed the factories as usual this morning but caused no trouble

Representatives of strikers and manufacturers after acting on the suggestion of Judge Manning will report after the meeting with the citizens committee in Salem

The program calls for a period of probation of six months or perhaps to the end of the year

During that period the strikers would return to work and their union organization would be completed

By the end of the period sufficient experience should be gained to furnish formal decision for reorganization of the union, it was stated

During the probation period the citizens' committee, or a similar impartial group, would meet at regular intervals and would serve as umpire in any difficulties which might occur

Clergy Blocked Jean Parker's Request for Beer License

Priests of St. James parish were the objectors to the South End Club of Jean Parker Casey, prominent figure in the Garrett and other police investigations.

This was revealed today by Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley, as he scanned the disapproved application for a beer license that was sought by Mrs. Casey and others under the old charter of the Eureka Social and Athletic Club.

"PUT UP OR SHUT UP"

Her charge that a Saturday raid was the result of her failure to pay police $100 graft was received with a "put up or shut up" statement of the police head in which he invited Mrs. Casey to furnish evidence of such a deal or make no more similar accusations.

Emil Sorocco, 40, a waiter, charged with keeping and exposing liquor for sale, appeared in municipal court this morning with John P. Feeney as his attorney. Mrs. Casey was in the courthouse, but waited in the wrong courtroom and so did not witness the brief proceedings

Police asked a continuance to May 8 so that samples of the 25 pints which were seized by Sergt. Albert Madden and other officers can be analyzed. Sococco pleaded not guilty.

LICENSE OPPOSED

The license application, disapproved by Capt. William W. Livingston of the Warren ave. station, showed that the priests objected to the presence of the club in Harvard st., not far from the church site in Harrison ave., Supt. Crowley said.

The police head did not entirely dismiss the charge of alleged bribe overtures, however, nor the statement of Mrs. Casey that 63 speakeasies were operating in the South End.

He assigned Deputy Supt. Martin King, division inspector, to probe those charges and statements of Mrs. Casey that liquor was being sold to girls of tender age.

The Eureka Club raid was the first of those which operate under charters that were originally issued to reputable organizations. The Eureka charter was granted by the secretary of state in 1900.

Sturdy Police Legs Can Stand 'Em

Pattees will not have injurious effect on the health of Boston police officers, City Hospital officials informed Mayor Curley today after making a study of the question.

The report came as a result of a request by city councillors who feared the leather wraps would cause permanent disability of those wearing them for any length of time.

Dr. Mary E. Jones Loses $50,000 Suit

Dr. Mary E. Jones, of James st., South End, today lost her suit to recover $50,000 from Dr. Frederick W. Judge Whiting decided the doctor was acting properly in ordering the woman physician committed for observation.

Air Officials Open State Inquiry Into Fatal Plane Crash

Maj. Clarence E. Hodge, state supervisor of aviation and Inspector Robert D. Hoyt of the U. S. Department of Commerce, began investigation today of the crash which killed Edward M. Jenna, 37, of Branchand Rd., Belmont, in East Boston last night

Jenna, returning to the airport after flying over his home, dropped 500 feet when his small monoplane went into a tailspin. His son, Malcolm, 14, saw the crash, as did hundreds of others. Jenna was an amateur air enthusiast.

A crowd of men, women and children in the park narrowly escaped death as the plane plunged to the ground. They scattered in all directions when warning shouts drew their attention to the plane plunging toward them. The machine crashed only 10 feet from a group of fleeing children.

Jenna was apparently killed instantly in the crash. Several witnesses rushed to aid him but his body was wedged in the twisted mass of wreckage Firemen were forced to use axes to chop away the wreckage.

The son accompanied his father's body to the hospital He bore the shock bravely and was later taken home by friends

Jenna, a photo-engraver, had been engaged in flying for the past few years and was considered a careful and conservative pilot. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Irene Jenna, his son, three sisters and two brothers.

NEW EASTMAN LABORATORIES DEDICATED

Ceremonies Attended by 250 of Nation's Noted Scientists

A project termed a "dream castle a half century ago was fulfilled today in the dedication of the George Eastman Research Laboratories at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Nearly 250 of the leading chemists and physicists of the country were present

In his dedicatory address, Dr. Karl H. Compton, president of M. I. T., pointed out that the Kodak king had contributed $20,000,000 to Tech under the name of the mysterious benefactor," "Mr. Smith.

The new research laboratories, which form a wing of the main Tech building on the side furthest from Massachusetts ave., represent the most advanced facilities for graduate research and training in physics and chemistry in the world.

The new building will be devoted, according to Prof. Samuel C. Prescott, dean of science at M. I. T., "to the pursuit of truth, whose guiding star was Eastman's inspiration."

HISTORICAL PAPERS

The rest of the morning session was taken up with a series of historical papers presented by members of the faculty about the various divisions of instruction and research at the institute in the main auditorium of the new building

The presentation of the papers was followed by an inspection of various laboratories of physics and chemistry. The guests then had luncheon at Walker Memorial.

This afternoon, Dr. Arthur Compton, winner of the Nobel prize in 1927 and a brother of President Compton, spoke on cosmic rays. Dr. Charles Kraus, noted Brown University chemist, also spoke.

DEDICATION OF TABLET

The exercises also included the dedication of a tablet commemorating the establishment in 1869 by William Burton Rogers, founder of Technology, of the first laboratory for instruction in physics. The tablet is at the entrance of the Rogers Laboratory of Physics.

The guests will attend tea in the Forris J. Moore room and a private dinner at Walker Memorial. They will later attend a reception being given by President Compton and members of the staff of the new laboratories.

Stowaway Dog Is Treated Like King

A stowaway that wasn't forced to work his passage but was treated like a king arrived in Boston aboard the Eastern Steamship Evangeline from St. John, N. B.

The stowaway is a big, black Newfoundland dog, pet of Frank Miller, St. John pilot. The animal wandered aboard in St. John Saturday and was not discovered until the ship was at sea. His friendly ways saved him from a scolding and he was turned over to the third officer who treated him like a notable. Frantic wires from his master begged that he be given consideration.

Return messages assured Miller his pet was safe and well and would be given every care until his return to St. John.

LEADERS DOWN AFTER MAKING NEW HIGHS

New York, May 1.—New highs were made for numerous leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange today as the rush of funds to stocks and commodities continued at a fast pace.

The advance encountered heavy profit taking and shares, after rising 1 to 4 points in leaders, receded somewhat from the best, a few dipping slightly under Saturday's close. The list surged up under leadership of industrials at the start, eased off, then came up again with rails in the van in the middle of the day, only to ease off from the best again.

RAILS SELL HIGHER

Extreme gains of about 4 points in Union Pacific, Santa Fe and U. S. Steel preferred, and nearly 3 in B. Steel common, Southern Pacific, and American Can, were recorded. Radio, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward. Among issues 2 points or so were New York Central, Pan American Petroleum, Consolidated Gas, Owens Illinois, and American Telephone. Oils were low.

A sharp drop in dollar exchange in the early dealings served to fan again the speculative fires in stocks and grains. Short covering Saturday and today was reported in substantial volume in shares by traders who have played for a sharp technical reaction last week.

The latest impetus to the markets was evidently Monday's acceptance measure, with assertions by congressional leaders that the bill should become law by the end of the week.

Usually well informed quarters in Wall Street, however, expressed the administration would scarcely take any drastically inflationary steps for some time, if at all.

BUSINESS NEWS GOOD.

Early open market operations by the Federal Reserve Bank were anticipated, but the authority to reduce the gold content of the dollar was believed here to be a power which would not be used, in view of the decisions at the recent economic conference. Sellers of the dollar was regarded as profit speculators, and President Roosevelt's said this might lead to a sharp rebound in it.

Trade news still continued to provide much encouragement to conservative commission house observers, the closing of banks in the fact that current share prices had reached levels abnormally high in relation to earnings, some said buyers seemed willing to discount expected improvement even 12 to 18 months in advance.

Steel production was expected to pass 30 per cent of capacity this week. Santa Fe reported 23,712 cars of freight handled last week, 5,000 above the 23,000 handled in the previous week, but topping the 22,460 in the same week of 1932. Cotton closed at 6.66 cents, another ¼ of a cent a pound to 6½ cents, the highest in many months.

Wheat Moves Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—Wheat advanced 2½ cents a bushel in early dealings today, and then reacted almost 2 cents. The main factor in the rise was the stimulus of the Roosevelt farm bill and attendant inflationary measures. Opening unchanged to 1c higher, prices moved rose further, and then reacted from top figures. Corn started ¾-⅞ up, and subsequently strengthened.

World Consuming of Cotton Is Up

New York, May 1 (AP) The New York Cotton Exchange Service today estimated world consumption of all kinds of cotton during March at 2,111,000 bales compared with 1,858,000 in January and 2,040,000 in March, 1932. During the eight months of this season, from August through March, world consumption has been at the rate of 18,148,000 bales as against 20,671,000 bales in the corresponding part of last season.

Lumber Output and Shipments Increase

New York, May 1 (AP)—Production at lumber mills in the week ended April 22 was the largest for any week this year, reports the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. With one exception, shipments that week were also the heaviest of the year to date.

At directors' meeting of Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., George Hawley, of C. H. Sprague & and Son, Boston, was elected acting president, taking over the duties temporarily of the late Eugene E. O'Donnell. Mr. Hawley has been a director of Eastern Steamship for several years.

Cotton Higher in New York Dealings

New York, May 1.—Cotton futures closed higher today on active general buying, higher Liverpool cables and the advance in foreign exchanges. May 6.17; July 8.30; October 8.45; December 8.65; January 8.70; March 8.80.

Ernst Lubitsch to Have Cast of Stars for "There Are Four Women," Paramount Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 1 Leave it to Ernst Lubitsch, director of sophisticated, subtle comedies, to think up a plot for "There Are Four Women." It not only has all the Lubitsch touches but it is extremely original. The cast of Madame DeFarrel is four-fold. Madame DeFarrel only one part of the story. The lives of all the people who are kept on that famous bed will be a part of the screen play.

Every feminine star who may be of importance on the Paramount is slated for a part in this Lubitsch production, and you know as well as I do there is one of them who wouldn't be eager to work for the person in charge of production.

Here's another new face for Hollywood and another name to remember. Claire Trevor who played in the New York stage production of "Dodsworth" is here May 3 on a Fox contract. Her introduction to the film fans will be in a new picture named, "Life in the Raw," starring George O'Brien.

• • •

The world's fair fad can show up in Chicago. A group of art agents of Hollywood is there for that reason. Claire Windsor has been given a contract for the fair. She will pose as the fair's "Spirit of Progress." Miss Windsor has been given a contract for the fair. She will pose as a Greek goddess. She will pose as all the goddesses who go to the state shows and she will be in charge of the particular feature.

A Line or Two:

Never was a policeman as welcome as the one who called on Marie Dressler a few days ago. He carried with him Marie's eight-months-old police puppy which had strayed away from home. Hollywood will welcome Safford Lambert of St. Louis next week. He is a member of the Busch family and comes here on a holiday. We wouldn't like to say a word but it's dollars to cents this first dinner engagement will be with Claire Windsor.

Brahms Festival Is Notable Success

By MOSES SMITH

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Serge Koussevitzky, closed the Brahms Festival and the season as a whole in a blaze of glory with the presentation of Brahms' German Requiem in Symphony Hall yesterday. The Handel and Haydn Society Chorus and Radcliffe Choral Society joined in the choral singing and David Blair McClosky, baritone soloist, participated in the concert which followed the presentation of the Requiem. The latter is a work of a kind and which was heard by an audience that filled the hall. The performance gained in beauty and moment as it went along so that the second half was far more effective than the first. Dr. Koussevitzky after an all too short season and an especially long final week, must have been a very tired man when he came on stage at the beginning. But he soon proved that he had overcome any fatigue he may have had after the whole of a program of one of the Requiem that one seemed as fresh as ever.

It is unnecessary to go into detail of the performance since on the whole was splendid. Miss Lord and was in better voice than she ever sang at a Symphony concert. The soloist, not only her part Mr. McCloskey, a newcomer, justified his much praised artistic performance by a chance for an important task. The end of the performance was succeeded by an extraordinary demonstration of applause on the part of the audience followed by all the performers but directed in the fine stage toward the magnetic leader of the orchestra.

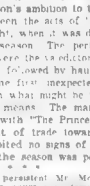
Lee Morrison Plans to Reopen Theater on Labor Day; New Version of Chiarelli's Play

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

There will be no free beer at the Copley this week. Mr. Lee Morrison's ambition to tickle the throats of his thirsty patrons between the acts of "The Prince of Pilsen" petered out Friday night, when it was decided to nail up the shutters and call it a season. The performances Saturday of "No, No, Nanette" were the last enticing gestures of a season ambitiously begun and followed by haunting experiences. The bank holiday was the first unexpected jolt that had a none too happy effect upon what might be termed the Copley's department of ways and means. The management had hoped that a little free beer with "The Prince of Pilsen" this week would turn the current of trade toward upper Stuart street. As there were exhibited no signs of interest in Mr. Morrison's gallant proposal, the season was permitted to die a natural death.

• • •

But the persistent Mr. Morrison, whose courage in tempting fate with an elusive drama is not matched by many of our more impressionable citizens, is up to the task of keeping the Copley Light Opera Company, to start on Labor Day with the romantic operetta, "The Vagabond King." This announcement is authorized by the impresario himself. He remarks on what the new season would bring forth. Among these was the 21st night that the cardinal had agreed to reason in the matter of a ten-cent dance. Despite charges that the summer it was a ex-pensive, a new stage lighting system will be installed, which, when completed, will provide a wider range of action in produc-



Lee Morrison

When the curtain rises of Luigi Chiarelli's "The Mask and the Face" at the Colonial tonight, it will be accepted as a new play, testing its possibilities on these Eastern shores, before leaping upon Broadway. But it is not as new as all that. About nine years ago an adaptation of the piece was made by Chester Baily Fernald and produced in New York by Brock Pemberton. It was later presented in Boston, Casting and other difficulties made it a failure. It was Chiarelli's first play "The Mask and the Face," as it now comes to the footlights, is a new version written by W. Somerset Maugham, one of the drama's most skilful architects. Maugham, we are told, has lived in Italy and knows the Italian mind. It is reported that Maugham, who saw the play in its native soil, wanted to undertake its adaptation for the American stage, but was prevented by Fernald's priority as to the rights. These having expired, he joined hands with the Theater Guild in the preparation of a new version. The play opens, at least, "The Mask and the Face" is a new play.

Russian Film

The new Soviet film, "Shame" opens at the Fine Arts today. The film is in many ways a departure from the old type of Russian film, in that it contains no interest and is interested in portraying individuals as such rather than as part of the struggling masses in which individual characterizations were formerly subordinated to the mass hero who suggested the new scheme of things.

Sevitzky Cheered by Berlin Crowd

By HARRIS MORGAN

Fabien Sevitzky's fans and who isn't among them? will be interested in news just received from him. First, he has gone for his home coming. He announces that he expects to take his wonted place at the Metropolitan, on Friday, May 5.

European clippings reveal interesting incidents connected with his musical appearances in Europe. At Berlin where he led the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, Sevitzky got an ovation. Then after his presentation of the Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony, the audience cheered and "bravoed" the young maestro, Sevitzky returned to the stage for seven bows to satisfy the throng.

Upon his return Mr. Sevitzky states he will present to his audiences from time to time, compositions by new American composers.

PLENTY OF TALENT

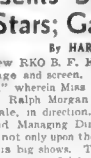
"The Kiss Before the Mirror" Presents Sterling Trio of Stars; Gala Stage Bill

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The new RKO B. F. Keith program is a blend of expert ness on stage and screen. The photoplay is "The Kiss Before the Mirror," wherein Miss Nancy Carroll is starred, with Paul Lukas and Ralph Morgan contributing richly in acting, and James Whale, in direction. The footlight bill is of the gala variety, and Managing Director William H. Raynor is to be congratulated, not only upon the acts, but upon his excellent presentation of his big shows. This happens to come under the caption of "Prosperity Jubilee"; and, thanks be, there is ample comedy provided to back up the other fine elements in the program.

• • •

The Continental touch stands out in this picture drama. The story has its strong points—two men, two women and a baby. Of course that always look out when reference is made to the baby—because the material for the purpose of one pair ends with a mix-up, based in jealousy. A lawyer friend, through defense of his pal, discovers that the tragedy mirrors" his own case. In that motivation there is the European theme. In the "legit" it would make a strong play, but it is the type most difficult to transfer to the screen. Yet Whale has injected much of the stage technique and much of the necessary atmosphere, and Messrs. Lukas and Morgan, out of different tone, weave vigorous characterizations.



Nancy Carroll

The men are the outstanding performers, but it must be said that Miss Carroll gains steadily in dramatic ability, and is as attractive as ever—nay, more so with a new hair style.

• • •

The Raynor touch is something to note in the staging of the vaudeville. Also, Mr. Rayon is to be commended on the quality of the turns. It is a generous bill with three or four topnotchers and all standards.

The Roxy Ensemble, heard for a few numbers, is heartily acclaimed by the audience, and their playing mostly classic numbers, is a great applause. The Raynor orchestra not only shines while playing, its antics and its musical numbers, but serves as an effective background for other acts. Vila and Buddy Egson are expert dancers, and the shoe tapping item is a corker.

Two girl stooges assist Sidney Fare in a hilarious turn, and feminine side are of the surefire kind for laughter. In black face Tyler Mason sings and pantomimes amiably and with comic effect, and the Dennati Troupe in one of the cleverest of acrobatic units, doing stunts that deserve the adjective sensation. And a gentleman with three dogs, introduced as Sydell and Spotty has as neat a canine turn as we have seen in a long time.

That's surely enough, but Mr. Raynor is always timely, and here he has Larry Flint and orchestra introducing an up-to-the-minute selection.

This Is Derby Week In Old Kentucky Race Real Classic

Social Leaders Attend Purse Is $50,000 Once Paid 91 to 1

By JACK CONWAY

MR. BOSTON

The great Kentucky Derby, which will be held at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., on Saturday afternoon, will bring together a most brilliant field of three-year-olds that ever shot away from a barrier in a mile and a quarter race.

The record field to date is 22, but it is expected that more horses will start in Saturday's classic. The stake is $50,000 added, which is a great deal of money these days. In 1928, Reigh Count won $55,375 for his owners when he flashed across the finish line in the lead.

Warren Brown, able sports editor of the Chicago Herald-Examiner who has been reporting Kentucky Derbies for years, recalls that Donerail, the 1913 Derby winner, paid off at 91 to 1. Twenty Grand, which set the record of 2:01 4-5 for the mile and a quarter in 1931, only paid 88 cents on every dollar paid into the pari-mutuel machines.

I do not know of any place I would rather be than in Louisville on the day of the Derby or during the week of the race. The Derby is alive with people from all parts of the United States. The Derby is a social as well as a racing affair. If you live in old Kentucky and fail to attend the Derby, you just do not belong.

On Derby week, I have got up with the sun to go to Churchill Downs to see the horses breeze in trial spins. The track is situated in the Blue Grass country. The natural scenery is magnificent, and the sight of the thoroughbreds dashing around the track is inspiring.

There are those persons who will argue that the Belmont track and its buildings make a more imposing sight than the layout at Churchill Downs. Others may say the Arlington track at Chicago is the best in the world. Personally I shall string along with Churchill Downs. Perhaps it is because it has its big day in the spring when everything is so green and the sunlight so glorious.

Boston will be well represented at Churchill Downs on Saturday. Our best people have learned that the Kentucky Derby is quite a race, and the occasion for everybody to go on parade.

Massachusetts Likely to Accept Pari-Mutuel Bill

Massachusetts is expected to accept the pari-mutuel racing bill when the question is placed before the voters in the form of a referendum in June. The fact New Hampshire has already legalized pari-mutuel betting at races is one reason why this state will also probably accept the running horse sport. It will be argued that Massachusetts tax payers should receive help from racing as well as the residents of New Hampshire.

The race meetings at The Country Club in Brookline and at Narragansett Park in Framingham each June have shown people on what a high plane racing is conducted. These meetings have attracted thousands of persons who have witnessed keen competition. The best horses in the East will race at Brookline and at Framingham this year.

Don George Signed for Title Bout on May 17

Ed Don George has signed to defend his title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion under the direction of Paul Bowser at the Boston Garden on May 17. Bowser expects to name George's opponent today.

George has told Bowser he is prepared to meet any man in the world. Don has plenty of confidence in himself, and does not appear to be greatly upset over the fact the fans would like to see him knocked off. George occupies the position of most champions—he public is always eager to see somebody come along and defeat the holder.

Paul Bowser is anxious to clear up the tangle in the heavyweight situation. He also realizes George must be pitted against the first class opponent if he is to draw a big crowd. Therefore Bowser may be depended upon to send George into the ring against one of the best of the challengers.

Brouillard-Slaughter Bout May Be for World's Title

Eddie Mack will appear before the Massachusetts Boxing Commission on Wednesday and ask that the winner of the bout between Lou Brouillard and Sammy Slaughter at the Arena on May 16 be recognized as the world's middleweight champion. He will also request that the distance of the tussle be increased to 15 rounds.

Gorilla Jones of Akron, Ohio, was recognized as middleweight boss by the National Boxing Association, while the New York Athletic Commission hailed Ben Jeby as the middleweight champion. These boxers have each been suspended for a year as a result of their dismal bout at Cleveland. The middleweight class should not be left without a leader. Slaughter and Brouillard rank with the best men of their weight in the world.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission has as much right to name champions as the New York Athletic Commission or the National Boxing Association.

Random Shots at the Target

Max Schmeling appears to be the most popular target in the boxing game . . . Billy Duffy, Carnera's manager, says Primo will not give the German a title shot in the event he defeats Jack Sharkey on June 29 . . . Duffy points to the fact Schmeling ran out of a contract to meet Carnera in September, 1931 . . . Carnera was a court action against Schmeling over the matter . . . With Sharkey also banning a Schmeling bout, the Schmeling-Baer bout is merely another fight . . . It has been deprived of any possible championship hookup . . . The two Maxes should furnish a red hot battle as they are both aggressive and can punch.

THIRD BASE UNSAFE AS BRAVE, GIANT GO DOWN AND OUT

BILL URBANSKI JOHNNY VERGEZ

DICK GYSELMAN SAM LESLIE EMPIRE BAKR

Third base was a very unpleasant spot in the opening game of the twin bill Sunday at the Wigwam, for a Brave, and again a Giant. The boys went down, and out. At top, Urbanski loses out after singling, and being bunted ahead, when Hubell fields the ball and tosses to Vergez. In lower scene, note remarkable leg spread of Gyselman as he tags out Leslie. Sam doubled and tried to stretch the hit but a relay via Maranville to Gyselman saved the day. Note both third basemen away from bags. They're not being spiked unnecessarily. And why should they be? Story on Page 18.

VINES STARTS NET WHIRL

Pasadena, Calif., May 1 (AP)—Ellsworth Vines, Jr., the nation's premier tennis trooper, packed bag and baggage today to leave for the East, bent on giving the United States a new deal in international play this summer.

It was the same tall youth who two years ago quietly shook the dust of California from his feet and set out to get himself a reputation, disappointed in not being selected as a Davis Cup team member.

Vines won the right to represent his country in 1932 by collecting 13 singles and 11 doubles championships that summer.

"I'm not particularly after the Wimbledon title again this year," he said. "What I want to do most of all is to help bring that Davis Cup back from France."

BRAVES RELEASE EARL CLARK

Earl Clark, outfielder, was today released outright to the Albany Club of the International League, which team he will report to at Rochester, N. Y., tomorrow.

Clark played with the Braves this season. His batting average was .250 and fielding average 1000. He bats and throws right handed and his home is in Washington, D. C.

Germany Prepares for '36 Olympiad

Berlin, May 1 (AP)—Captain Hans Von Tschammer-Osten, new commissar of sports, today told the Berlin editor of Wolff's Telegraph Bureau that Germany was going ahead with plans for the 1936 Olympic games.

Asked what the attitude toward the games would be, the commissar said:

"Chancellor Hitler has given full approval to holding the Olympics in Berlin. For us this means we are continuing our preparations. In any case, foreign guests will be cordially welcomed."

CRIMSON NINE MEETS BROWN

The Harvard varsity nine, with two games listed for the coming week, will attempt to make a comeback after its defeat by Columbia in an Eastern Intercollegiate league game.

The Lions climbed back to the league top by handing the Crimson its first defeat of the season.

Harvard will play Brown on Wednesday and Princeton on Saturday. The latter game is a league contest. Harvard has already defeated Princeton once this season and with Loughlin in shape again by Saturday has a good chance of repeating.

Only a letdown in the Harvard defense and an inability to hit in the pinches prevented Harvard from holding the Lions even on Saturday. At least four of the Columbia tallies were made through errors and twice the Crimson had the bases loaded, in the ninth with only one man out, yet was unable to capitalize.

Pierotti to Rule Martin-Dean Fray

Al Pierotti will be the third man in the ring when Bull Martin and Alan Mountain Dean clash in the main bout of Steve McPherson's wrestling show at the Arena Wednesday night.

In the semifinal, Joe Kujot and The Black Secret, both undefeated, will meet.

Swivel's Cough Costs Mary Derby Hopes

By BILL CORUM

New York, May 1 (US)—Swivel is out of the Kentucky Derby because of a cough, and I hope that while she is about it she coughs up that $20 I gave Tom Shaw to bet on her in the big race. Like a lot of other gals, she must think money grows on trees.

As things stand now she is out of the race. I'm out the twenty, and our girl Mary is out that plush-lined perambulator for the expected heir, still, every cloud has a silver lining. The kid may learn to walk early.

I am mailing Mary the ticket this morning, so she will have something to remember Mr. Shaw by.

It was discovered the other morning that Swivel was running a temperature of 102. The doctor thought that was high. But if he had wanted to put his finger on a real pulse, he should have come around and taken mine when I heard the news.

$600 MYTH FADES

I felt it was just like taking that $600 right out of Mary's and my pocket. Or rather, Mary's pocketbook and my pocket. Why I practically had my $200 spent and could be surprised at all the nice things I was going to do with it. It was even thinking something about buying some bill.

Well, it just goes to prove again what a sucker a man is to trust a filly. Of course, he always says to himself, this one is different. Yeah? That's what I said about Swivel. I thought she was the Mae West of the thoroughbred ladies' seminary until she started reaching for the quinine and the hot water bottle and moaning for the doctor.

It was my hunch, nay, conviction, that the rest of the Derby field wouldn't know which way she went once they hit the stretch. I thought she was a cinch. A mortal. A lay-down. And now look at her. Coughing and gloaming and going on like any other sweet young thing with the croup.

Not [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] reason. Similar experiences never have but maybe this will Hereafter I'll stay back in the back room and play poker with the bovs and don't be giving me any more tips phone numbers, either. I'm off "them fillies" for good.

DERBY WIDE OPEN

The defection of Swivel, [illegible] the Derby wide open and straight [illegible] the chances of the [illegible] tenders no little. The Chesapeake at Havre de Grace this afternoon may produce a [illegible] candidate but right now it looks as though the race has only [illegible] offer except [illegible] Ladysman.

Apparently they are going to [illegible] Black Lad's nose. If one [illegible] matter to me I'd [illegible] on the form that would [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] a quarter [illegible] under [illegible] weight.

But then I offer one [illegible] tion that makes horse racing a [illegible] no doubt. Mears, Coe and Stoltz know their horses. If they don't, who does? So let us just wait a little longer and see what turns up.

LIONS IN FRONT OF E. L. PACK; YALE THIRD

By the Associated Press

Although the mad rush of Columbia toward the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League championship was checked by Johnny Broaca and Yale at New Haven last Friday, the Lions bounded back from their defeat to turn back Harvard, 7-0, in Cambridge and so wound up another week well in the van of all league rivals.

Andy Coakley's boys now have won six and lost one, with Harvard next in line with two victories and one defeat. The Crimson was temporarily in the lead following Columbia's defeat at New Haven.

In defeating Harvard, Ray White pitched his third shutout in four successive victories and increased his strikeout string to 28, just five behind Johnny Jackson of Pennsylvania, the leader. White has yielded just one run in 32 innings this season and is well on his way to a remarkable earned-run figure.

Kline of Yale sets the pace for the league batters with .571, gained in his first two championship games against Columbia and Pennsylvania.

TAD'S FAVORITE INDOOR SPORTS

U. S. STAR'S LEG AMPUTATED

Santa Monica, Cal., May 1—Bob Norene will never pound down the cinder track as a sprinter again to win Olympic honors and the plaudits of thousands.

The young man, who was second in the 880-yard Olympic dash, seriously injured in a traffic accident Saturday night, had his right leg amputated above the knee at the Santa Monica hospital yesterday.

Dr. W. S. Mortensen performed the operation, which he said was necessary because the member was badly shattered when the automobile in which he was riding collided with another car. Norene's back was also badly injured and for a time it was feared his spine was broken.

He and three other members of the U. S. track team were returning from an invitational track meet at Santa Barbara when the crash occurred.

Babe's Eye Lotion Good to Drink

New York, May 1 (INS)—In the clubhouse of the New York Yankees, just before yesterday's doubleheader with the Red Sox, Babe Ruth was bathing his million-dollar optics with what he thought was his favorite eye lotion. Tony Lazzeri and Lou Gehrig came along and drank it.

"That stuff puts the old pep into you," they explained to the perplexed home run maestro. To prove it, Lazzeri went out and blasted seven straight hits, including two homers, and Gehrig pasted three hits in a row, also including two homers.

Later, the Babe, still speechless save for occasional mutterings about cast-iron stomachs, was told that Lazzeri and Gehrig had opened his locker, emptied the bottle of eye lotion and refilled it with good old aqua pura.

Diamond Dust

—By JOE CASHMAN—

The Braves find some one opponent a cinch to beat every year. Last season it was the Dodgers, whom they whipped 13 times in 22 starts.

This year it seems to be the Giants. All four games the Terrymen have lost in the current race have been taken by the Tribesmen. That sort of evens up for the six straight wins the Yanks have gained over the Red Sox.

Hoyt Wins Again

The Giants' double defeat at the Wigwam on the Sabbath cost them the league lead as the Pirates walloped the Reds, 8 to 1, and regained the peak. Waite Hoyt, picked up by the Bucs when no other major league club would give him a trial, held the Reds to five hits as he won his second game.

A six-run rally in the sixth gave the Dodgers a 6 to 5 triumph over the Phillies and kept the Quaker City entry in the cellar. Lefty O'Doul, National League batting king, snapped out of a long slump with a home run and a single to help Ossie Carroll, former Holy Cross ace, gain his third victory.

Jonathan Stone, Detroit left-fielder, will have a lot of swell stories to tell his grandchildren of Sunday, April 30, 1933. On that day and date, Jonathan helped himself to two home runs and four doubles, as the Tigers were spitting a doubleheader with the Browns. Five of the six runs in the second game were homers. Gerald Walker duplicated Stone's feat of hitting two for the Bengals and Sammy West hit one to save the Browns a shutout.

That little melee with the Yanks down in Washington last week worked wonders with the Senators. They haven't lost a game since. Yesterday they won their fourth straight by nosing out the Indians, 3 to 1.

This year it seems to be the Giants. All four games the Terrymen have lost in the current race have been taken by the Tribesmen. That sort of evens up for the six straight wins the Yanks have gained over the Red Sox.

Ralph Kress with a mate on base settled a great pitching duel between Paul Gregory and Clint Brown. It was Gregory's first win of the season and Brown's first setback in four starts.

The Giants did more than trail with the Cubs during spring training this season. They also copied the Windy City attire of plain gray uniform, dark cap and dark stockings.

Dick Gyselman shapes up as the finest defensive third sacker to break into the National league since Pie Traynor. The cost youngster has made the most difficult stops and throws look easy in the three games he has played with the Wigwam. He's getting his share of hits, too. Dick, alone, is worth far more than the $60,000 the Tribe management paid for him and Al Wright. And the latter will grab plenty of headlines if that inimitable Rabbit ever gives him the chance, something the midget seems to have no intention of doing for years.

Frank Hogan, who is handling the Tribal hurlers as they haven't been handled since Hank Gowdy was in harness, and Blondy Ryan, the Lyan boy who is shortstopping for the Giants, are going sandwriting this p. m. to help open the Milton Twi League season. The Cunninghams A. C. and Mattapan Baptist Church nines will do the playing at Milton Town Field.

PURES BATTLE B. U. CARNIVAL HERE MAY 8 ON TOMORROW

A brilliant sports carnival held as part of Boston University Junior Week will take place at the William E. Nickerson Recreation Field, Weston, tomorrow. Every varsity team, plus intramural activities, will swing into action and as an added attraction, Ed Don George, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, will put on a mat exhibition with a partner.

The baseball team plays Boston College and the tennis team will face the Eagle racquet wielders. The lacrosse team mets Tufts and its track team is host to the Jumbo trackmen.

If the Terriers can pin a defeat on Boston College in baseball, their season is a success. It is with this in mind that John Harmon's team has been working for the past week.

Ray Campion, who has been resting for over a week, will hurl for the Terriers. As Boston University has not played for the last nine days, the entire mound staff is in shape and Coach Harmon will have plenty of twirlers available if Campion is not at top form.

Asbjornson Given Release by Reds

Cincinnati, May 1 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds today sent Pitcher John Fongey on option to the Jersey City Club of the International League, and gave Catcher Rob Asbjornson his unconditional release. Asbjornson had been returned to the Reds by Toledo of the American Association, to whom he was loaned out on option.

RICH STAKES AT SPORTSMAN'S

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—The harrier snaps at Exhibition Park at Aurora and at Sportsmans Park, Chicago, today are inaugurating a six months' racing season in Illinois that will be the richest offered in America.

Moving through meetings at Aurora, Sportsmans Park, Washington Park, Arlington, Hawthorne and Lincoln fields and then back again to Sportsmans and Aurora, the thoroughbreds will be racing in the Chicago metropolitan district daily, except Sunday, until the end of October.

There will be inaugural handicap at each track, each day each handicap attracting a band of fleet performers over the six furlong route.

For the first time in the Chicago racing district Exposition Park, located 25 miles west, was offering a free gate.

After the lid has been pried off with the 39-day meetings of Sportsmans Park and Exhibition Park, the thoroughbreds move to Washington Park, May 22.

Washington Park will see the first rich stake event with the running of the $25,000 added American Derby, June 3. Arlington Park will follow with the richest 30-day meeting held anywhere in the country, offering a $50,000 added futurity and the Arlington classic which this year has been reduced to $35,000 added value.

Coast Club Solves 'Tramp' Problem

During the present economic condition most of the Seattle clubs have waived payment of initiation fees and accept playing-membership for payment of dues only. The "tramp" golfers were charging up bills at one course and moving up to another before paying up.

So the private clubs, including the Seattle Yacht, Tennis, Arctic, Elks and Washington Athletic Clubs have banded together with nine of the golf clubs to form a central credit bureau.

Before members are accepted into any of the association clubs their credit is checked through a central credit bureau and if old bills are still due at any of these affiliated organizations the applications are not accepted.

Membership must be applied for a year's play only and the application blanks are 1 mthe forms of promisory notes.

Ohio U. Coach Adds to Work

Columbus, O., April 29 (INS)—Although for four years his duties have been only executive, L. W. St. John, veteran athletic director of Ohio State University, is being returned to the coaching lines by the depression.

For economy's sake, "Saint" will take charge of the varsity baseball team along with Assistant Coach Floyd Stahl.

Due to decreased athletic receipts, Wayne Wright, former Ohio State baseball coach, is being relieved of the payroll. Wright is a former American Association pitcher.

AUNT BELLA PENS TRIBUTE TO ROSE

Note.—We have received numerous requests for more poems by Aunt Bella. "She done very well with her sad poem," writes an admirer from Scranton, Pa. "I cried when I read Aunt Bella's ballad about her unappy marriage," postcards "Broken Reed." Today Auntie B. gives us a load of tender philosophy:

WAS IT A DREAM?

I walked one day through the city's street
With the dirty pavement under my feet,
And as I glanced through the window glass
Of the various domiciles I chanced to pass;
I saw sights which I could not help seeing
Which made me disgusted with the human being—
Brutal husbands, who had come home tight,
Talking boisterously far into the night—
Women dressed in vain satins and frills
Getting ready to go out and get loaded to the gills.
I asked myself, "Is it a dream?"
And "Are things really as bad as they seem?"
Then from the sad'ning sights to turn I strove
And by chance into an alley I seemed to hove,
And there in an old, dirty ash-can I spied
A itsy-bitsy rosebud thrown by some scornful hand aside.
Some bastard this beautiful rose away had thrown.
I picked it up and pressed it to my breast with a groan.
"Is it a dream?" I asked myself, "Is it a dream?"
And then came the answer, "Things are not as bad as they seem.
"There is beauty everywheres,
"But too many so-and-sos are not aweres
"Of the beautiful things that they might spys
"If they would snap out of it and open their eyes."

Aunt Bella.

The Economic Parleys

U. S. Home Market Threatened

The current interchanges of views at Washington with representatives of foreign countries constitute a friendly gesture.

Yet the question arises whether or not such amicable conversations can reverse the economic currents which have been constricting international trade.

For some nations export trade may be a matter of life or death, yet the international propaganda that big foreign trade is necessary and desirable for all nations may be grossly misleading.

The United States has within its own confines practically all of the resources needed for a high degree of prosperity.

On the other hand, newly created states in eastern Europe, including defiated Austria, are not sufficiently endowed with natural resources to be self-contained.

Accordingly, the import quotas and exchange and trade restrictions which have been set up in eastern Europe may be intolerable barriers there, yet the same logic does not apply to the United States, which normally carries on within its own borders one-half of the total trade of the world.

When the American tariff policy is approached from the standpoint of definite statistics, the suggestion of Secretary of State Hull that our tariff rates should be lowered seems especially dangerous.

Thus far, the preliminary conversations at Washington have been scheduled with our international competitors, rather than with those with whom we can trade on a rational basis.

With all the leading nations now well equipped with industrial technique, there is little opportunity for profitable interchange among such nations of manufactured goods which can be produced at home.

Even in the peak years of 1927-29, American exports constituted only 6 per cent of the net national income, and perhaps only 3 per cent of the country's gross business.

Accordingly, the beautiful sentiments which constitute the agenda for the forthcoming International Economic Conference threaten the safety of our home market, which represents 94 per cent of our total business.

Examining the actual international balance sheet, instead of following the prevailing literary will o' the wisp doctrines concerning foreign trade, Samuel Crowther, in the Saturday Evening Post, concludes:

"Since we do not really need to buy much from abroad, our purchases would be incidental to collecting our debts—which is an unpleasant fact that should cause considerable consternation in foreign circles. Similarly, our exports would have to be put into the purely incidental class as far as the national welfare is concerned, and the amount would be determined by the international balance sheet."

If we turn away from free trade because we are unwilling to drag down our wage levels to the pauperized standards prevailing in many other countries, then we must find an outlet for our productive power in an expanded home market.

This entails a determined fight against poverty and low living standards at home.

Abandoning forced efforts to get an artificial volume of foreign trade, we shall find prosperity in raising the buying power of our own people.

The outside world, too, would benefit from a rehabilitation of economic security in this country.

Prosperity Program

Government's Credit to Be Utilized

In asking unprecedented control over the money system of the country, the Administration reveals it has a definite program in mind for restoration of employment and, thus, of prosperity for THE WHOLE NATION.

President Roosevelt's program would provide, as a major plank in his money program, a ready market for three billion dollars of United States Government bonds.

The Federal Reserve System would be required to absorb up to three billion dollars of the Government's bonds.

Why does President Roosevelt desire a READY MARKET for this amount of Government bonds?

Because he contemplates UTILIZING the Government's credit in his employment and prosperity program!

It already has been revealed by the Administration that large scale public works are to be undertaken as a direct employment-creating scheme.

To finance so vast an undertaking will require for its inauguration a substantial draft on the Government's credit.

The President merely is paving the way.

He wants the Government bonds to be immediately absorbed whenever the requirements of the public works program demand funds.

To assure stability of all its bonds, the Government has been striving heroically to balance its ordinary budget.

The public works program, contrary to false assertions of its bitterest opponents, will not undermine the Government credit.

For the Administration has pledged itself to public works which will be SELF-SUSTAINING. This means that, upon completion, the Government-built projects will produce sufficient income to carry their cost (the bonds issued to pay for them) and presumably provide also a reasonable amortization to retire these bonds.

Examples of such projects come immediately to mind.

Housing projects in city slums will SUBSTITUTE for insanitary ancient buildings in which human beings live constantly exposed to ugliest dangers. Such a building program need not INCREASE by a single room the supply of available living quarters in a community.

It would represent merely the substitution of modern, sanitary fair-priced apartment facilities for the existing ugly, disease-ridden and generally vicious slums.

Another prospect for governmental self-sustaining expenditure:

All over the country today the Government rents space for Postoffices and other departments of the Government. The Government can BUILD in such communities its own projects to house the necessary offices and facilities. Savings on rent alone presumably would offset the carrying cost of such projects. And here, too, there can be allowed a reasonable annual amortization.

There are many other similarly worthy public works which could be undertaken as a public benefit and to stimulate employment.

In seeking to guarantee a ready market for Government bonds for this purpose the Administration is preparing the road for industrial and employment revival.

Just Folks

Two Philosophies

Raining! And it's cold wet rain;
Peonies will blossom soon again!
Or if you choose: Dark days like this
Are not my own idea of bliss.
I know my spine the water chills,
Rain may be good for daffodils
But I am subject to catarrh
And wet feet very dangerous are!

Raining! Cold, bitter rain and harsh,
The lawn is almost now a marsh.
Good for the roses: True enough!
But I need sun to do my stuff.
I find no keen enjoyment in Getting myself soaked to the skin.
Rain may bring blossoms fair to see,
But it brings suffering to me.

Rain! And divergent points of view
And both of them precisely true.
Rain brings the blossoms and the green
Which make the lovely summer scene;
Likewise to him who walks the street
For many a day it spells defeat,
But though man praises or complains,
Grumbles or grins, some days it rains.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Choose a Job That Hurts

DO YOU want to stay young, active, eager and magnetic?

Want to keep your enthusiasms and your place in the Big Parade? Want to be as vital at sixty as you were at sixteen?

It can be done. It has been done. There's one way of doing it—and only one:

Make life hard for yourself!

Keep life hard for yourself!

Elsie Robinson

Choose a job that hurts!

This, of course, isn't the sort of a job most of us are looking for. Anything but! We want a soft snap—easy hours, good pay, no interference or difficult demands. We are trained to desire that sort of a job when we're youngsters. Constantly we hear of "lucky people" who have jobs like that. If, eventually, we land such a job for ourselves, we think we're sitting pretty. But, as a matter of fact, we couldn't be sitting worse.

There's nothing that will put you out of the running quicker than a soft snap.

You can't keep physically fit without exercise, fresh air, cold water, coarse, wholesome food. You can't keep mentally fit without conflict, criticism, danger, disappointment, failure, humiliation and constant, everlasting pressure. Grit in your food keeps fat off your waistline; grief in your work keeps it off your brain. Make things easy for a man, protect him from all trouble—and he becomes just so much complacent beef-on-the-hoof.

If you want to keep young and fit, pick a program that hurts.

And this applied to marriage, to be successful, should be perfectly happy. But nothing could be worse for the average human than to find a mate who always adores and protects, and never criticizes performance. This is particularly bad for women who have little contact with the world, save through their husbands. Such women invariably become conceited, selfish, intolerant—and thoroughly miserable.

An easy life is never a happy nor a healthy one. Its has no perspective, nothing to stimulate it, nothing to make it proud. The most petted and protected people are always the most peevish.

Keep hunting! That's the first law of life for every living thing. Don't let yourself be comfortable. Don't let yourself feel safe. Constantly set up more difficult and dangerous tasks for yourself. Never let yourself say, "Well, now I can take things easy." The minute you begin to take things easy, that minute you're cooked! When you stop doing, you start dying.

You may not know you're dying, stranger, but it's a cinch that everyone else will!

THIS IS LIFE

May Day Changes With Years From One of Gayety to Violence

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

Today is May Day. Today begins the little celebrations, which will last for the whole month, in which little groups of children in straggling procession, crowned with paper crowns in bright colors and gay with paper ribbons, will make their way to the nearest spot of green park, to go through the ritual of the May King and the May Queen and the winding of the May pole. You will hear the shrill little voices chanting incessantly

May party, May party, rah, rah, rah!

Little children carrying the May pole, one of the oldest of nature symbols, sign of fruitfulness and generation. And often by its side, the cross, for since mediaeval times May has been Mary's month, the month of Our Lady, and most of the little bands of children bear upon their banner the name of their parish.

But May is older than Mary. Most of the annual nature festivals we celebrate are older than the Church, yet quite as deep in their significance for all that.

The Flowering Month to Romans

The Greeks knew May as Maia, one of the Pleiades and the mother of Hermes, who, under his name of Mercury gave his name to the middle day of the Roman week. How the Greeks celebrated May I do not know. But to the Romans May was the month of Flora, the flowering month. Centuries later, the pedants of the French Revolution were to call it Floreal, the month when in Europe the spring really begins to appear, when the chestnut trees blossom in Paris and the crocuses spread the green carpets of the Alpine foothills. If over here in bleak Massachusetts we are fortunate enough to see an occasional daffodil or hyacinth, a clump of tulips or a Forsythia bush, we are lucky.

May Day is really Easter. Ours, of course is fixed by its proximity to the Jewish Passover, which in turn was fixed by the date of the vernal equinox, the day when spring begins. But that is only astronomical lore. The heart of man recognises Easter and the spring by the coming of the flowers, the swelling of the buds. That is why May Day is sacred. To the Romans the month was the feast of the dead, in which there were no marriages, but to the northern barbarian it was the month of the new flowering of the world.

In Ireland, Scotland and Brittany it was Beltane, the day of magic fires in the fields and magic cakes to be eaten ceremonially. Beltane or May Day, it was welcomed with rejoicing, with all night vigils in the woods and fields, the magical cutting of boughs and flowers to be brought back at dawn with rejoicing, and with ancient heathen rites which the Church frowned on but was unable to forbid. Kipling has a poem about it in one of his children's books.

"Oh, do not tell the Priest our plight
For he would call it a sin,
But we have been out in the woods all night
A-conjuring Summer in;
And we bring you news by word of mouth,
Good news for cattle and corn,
That now is the sun come up from the south
With oak and ash and thorn."

And when the day broke there was dancing around the May Pole, old symbol of fertility, and dancing through the village in and out of the doors, the little tinkers and chimney sweeps dressed up as Jack-a-the-Green and Maid Marian, attended by the hobby horse and the morris dancers. What their origin is, or how far they go back in heathen history, we can only guess.

Significance of Day Changes Greatly

The Church was made uneasy by May Day, but to little avail. But the Puritans were more inexorable. The Puritans hated the May Pole. John Endicott cut one down at Merrymount in Quincy. The English Puritans forbade it in 1641, hoping to bring to an end the "Merrie England" of Elizabeth. And on the whole they succeeded, until modern times. From their point of view they did well, for May Day is a symbol of natural human gaiety, of heathen license, of pagan worship of nature, of age-old protest of the natural man against restraint.

In our modern time May Day has come to mean another protest as well. Today Moscow celebrates one of the great festivals of Communism. Today even Chancellor Hitler will permit the Socialist celebration in Berlin. The Massachusetts radicals, with the wise permission of the authorities, will demonstrate on the Common.

It began, I believe, as a kind of Memorial Day for the men and women killed in the Paris Commune in 1871. Those days of internecine slaughter made a tremendous impression on the radical thought of Europe in the latter part of the 19th century. In 1889 the International Socialist Congress selected it as a universal day of recognition of the principles of the Red flag and the revolution. It gathers together in an all-embracing observance all shades of radical belief; socialists, communists, even anarchists, from pale pink to deep scarlet, bound together for the moment by their common hatred of, and determination to destroy, capitalism, the church, and parliamentary or representative government.

May Day Really a Day of Great Protest

So May Day becomes, anew, a day of protest. It remains pagan in its essence, having no truck with religion, but in addition it exemplifies rebellion against all that exists.

Nature is like that. Huxley speaks of civilization as a little spot in the middle of the jungle, cleared with pain and labor, cultivated with science and patience, protected from the in-creeping jungle only by that eternal vigilance which is the price of safety. Religion is a little spot in the jungle of nature magic and protected by unwearying vigilance.

May Day is a beautiful day to celebrate, but make no mistake about its nature! It is the day of the natural man obeying his natural instincts, in rebellion against what constrains him or would soften and civilize him. The little children carrying their May Pole are sweet and pretty. But far back in history behind them are naked men and women leaping over the Beltane fires and singing fiercely in the dark woods. And behind the songs and speeches and flag wavings at the Parkman Bandstand is something even more dark and terrible and to be feared. We may call it the instinct of Liberty.
